LITERARY DIGEST POLL.

The Literary Digest has concluded its poll on prohibition. It received only nine hundred thousand replies to ten million queries. The whole thing is considered more or less of a farce. It is like most straw votes, not likely to be entirely impartial and easily offset whichever way it may go.

The poll showed a strong opposition to a return to former wet conditions. It showed a strong prohibition sentiment with a leaning toward modification of the Volstead act to permit light wines and beer.

We do not believe, however, this modification would carry if put to a vote the country over.

Of course the poll was quite a big advertising scheme. It would be far more safe to get definite and personal expressions from leading citizens, for instance, from the doctors of the country, or from mayors of all cities, or from editors of both city and country newspapers. Any one or several of these classes could give a fair expression of personal as well as public opinion and tell from actual close contact and observation whether the country is better off under prohibition and whether modification of the law to permit light wines and beers would be in any way beneficial or safe.

A HIGH-GRADE TOWN.

Hibbing, Minnesota, a village of about 15,000 people, according to latest census returns, must be a very progressive town. The Outlook's attention is called to the fact that Hibbing's new high school is nearing completion. It is said to be the largest in the world. Its cost is $3,500,000 and will accommodate 3,500 students. It has 80 class rooms, an auditorium with a seating capacity of 2,500, two gymnasiums, a swimming pool, large library and study hall, forge, machine shop, laundry, automobile and gas engine repair working shop, sewing, cooking and millinery departments and an open-air room for anemic children. Among the features will be a dental and medical clinic, with a staff of physicians and dentists.

Who with children to educate in all that makes for high-class American citizenship would not like to send his children to an institution affording such advantages?

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK.

By proclamation of the governor the week of October 7 to 14 has been set apart as fire prevention week. Mayors, fire chiefs, schools and civic organizations are urged to undertake plans which will make the week truly effective. The object is primarily to educate the children and people generally in the need of greater care to prevent fires at all times and to improve means and methods of fire fighting and fire protection.

Governor Olcott in his proclamation setting apart and urging the observance of this week asks that special attention be given by all to the removal of anything about the home or place of business the presence of which adds to the fire hazard. He asks that the churches also aid to spread the idea by means of sermons and addresses and that the newspapers help by all means possible.

To impress the need of education and work for fire prevention he states the following facts:

"Year by year, the national destruction of life and property by fire has been mounting until the total annual loss of material wealth now approximates the enormous sum of $485,000,000. This means the wiping out of needed resources at the rate of about $1,370,900 a day, in addition to the destruction of 48 lives daily.

"In our own state, during the five years ended with 1920, our fire waste came to the great total of $19,395,286, a sum that would build 2,079 $5000 homes or many miles of good roads. Thus it is evident that we have been paying our full share of the tax levied by carelessness and ignorance in handling fire hazards.

Since most fires are preventable, the regrettable devastation by burning that takes place day after day, is largely unnecessary. It goes without saying that every effort should be made to relieve the people of the self-imposed burden represented by preventable fire."

The University of Oregon has been granted a chapter of the national honorary scholastic fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, in recognition of its high standards of scholarship. This is recognized as a high mark of distinction.

Work has started on the building in Portland by the Shrine of a hospital for crippled children.

It is gratifying to know that the coal and railroad strikes are practically ended.

HOW CALIFORNIA DOES IT.

California puts herself on display, invites inspection, follows up the prospects and sells the goods.

The Fresno Chamber of Commerce, in writing to the campaign committee of the Oregon exposition, states that a large part of the benefits of recent years were derived from the Panama-Pacific exposition.

"One of the big benefits was the world-wide publicity that was obtained as a result of that exposition," writes the secretary of the Fresno Chamber of Commerce. "This publicity served to put California on the map and later attracted hundreds of thousands of people to our state."

"Like in any merchandising, we must first show what we have to sell. In our case it was California. After showing our wares it was then necessary to complete the sales and this took ordinary salesmanship."

The Oregon exposition, according to the campaign committee, will result in a tremendous publicity campaign throughout the world, will bring people and in the end will serve to develop the state of Oregon like no other project could.

Commodity Credit for the Farmers.

Of deep interest to all who realize the close relationship between the farm credit situation and the prosperity of the community at large are the various plans being considered by congress to better this situation. Four bills on the subject of commodity credits for farmers are before the farm credit committee of the senate farm bloc. Mr. Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board, who has recently made a study of farm credits in Europe, recently appeared before the committee and championed the cause of a better system of credit for the farmer. He recommended the establishment of a Federal agency similar to the farm loan system, with a capital of $200,000,000 to extend short-term credit to agriculture. This credit system would be a commodity credit proposition, something which is being widely advocated by farmers' organizations. Mr. Baruch would divide the proposed system into three branches; credits on cattle and other livestock; credits relating to the marketing of crops when the products are warehoused or properly stored; credits for productive purposes, such as the purchase of fertilizer or improved machinery. He held that the new agency should either be entirely separate from the farm loan system, or a distinct branch, and in his opinion the Federal Reserve system should not be used for paper of more than six months. He believed that bonds could be sold in the market based on cattle paper or on notes secured by products in warehouses, just as well as farm loan bonds.

In the case of productive credits, he advocated guarantee of the notes given for purchase of fertilizer and machinery by a man's neighbors. Commenting on this plan, Senator McNary expressed the opinion that the average farmer would not go on his neighbor's note "for thirty cents". Mr. Baruch favored a plan for consolidating the four bills under consideration into one, eliminating the objectionable points of each, but utilizing the strong points and in this way enacting legislation for a strong and comprehensive system of commodity credit.

Based on farm prices as of September 1, the Department of Agriculture estimates total crop values, exclusive of animal products, for this year at $6,600,000,000. This is an increase of $1,250,000,000 over last year, or about 23 per cent. Although these valuations do not pretend to be final, still enough of a gain over last year seems to be assured to justify congratulations to the farmer on the improved agricultural situation.

European Affairs.

The possibility that England and perhaps other European nations will be involved in the conflict in the east has tended during the past week to divert attention from the economic problems with which Europe is wrestling. It was reported that Premier Lloyd George intended going to Geneva, where the third assembly of the League of Nations convened early in the month, "to lead personally an effort to establish regional peace compacts in the world", but in view of the war complication he will probably abandon this plan. Lord Robert Cecil, representing South Africa at the League, in reopening the debate on the work of the League, expressed the fear that it was in danger of being overwhelmed by a mass of detail, leading public opinion to underrate the really important work of the council. He asked "why the League of Nations could not intervene between Turkey and Greece and halt the bloodshed in Asia Minor", saying also that he thought "something might also have been done by the League to restore peace in Turkey and open the door for the restoration of relations between Russia and the outside world." He expressed the opinion that this is a world-wide question, in which reparations, the inter-Allied debts and the whole economic situation are involved. There seems to be a strong demand among the delegates to this year's assembly for an end of the prevailing system of international conferences. The leader of liberal thought of many countries, including even France, are said to believe that the time has come to terminate the deciding of all world questions by the winners of the war alone, and to establish instead a general international action on a peace basis, including all nations.

An Editor's Invoice.
