FARM REMINDERS WELL WORTH READING

The following useful farm reminders were recently received from the Oregon Agricultural College. The last one in regard to the growing of strawberries is particularly important:

Carbon Bisulfide Knocks Weevil. Weevil infested bins may be treated with carbon bisulfide to rid grain of the pest. To be effective, it is necessary to make the bin as nearly gas proof as possible. Stuff rags in cracks and use canvas over the open top. In treating use liquid at the rate of one pound to every 20 bushels of grain or ascertain the cubical contents of the bin and apply carbon bisulfide at the rate of eight pounds to every 1000 cubic feet of space. Pour the liquid over the surface of the grain or better still, place it in shallow pans on top of the grain. Close the bin and allow the fumes to act for 48 hours.

Mash Speeds Pullets.

If the pullets are a little slow in coming into production, feed a wet mash after the grain feeding in the afternoon. This is the most important time in starting pullets. Proper feeding will accomplish wonders in the production of winter eggs, which will determine a profit or a loss, according to the way the birds are handled. Feed according to the pullet's appetite rather than by measure, considering, of course, the rate of laying and the breed.

Pullets are Overfed.

One hour after feeding the pullets stir up the litter. If there is a lot of grain left you are feeding too much of it so that the birds will have no appetite for mash which keeps them in a laying condition. If this is kept up the combs start shrinking and they soon go out of condition. They should not sit around on the ground or be on the perches during the day but should be out scratching. They will respond according to the way they are treated.

WHAT ONE GIRL DID IN CLUB WORK

That girls can make a success of raising hogs and even carry off some of the leading prizes was proven by Isabel Newlands, who secured a state championship at the state fair this year on her Duroc-Jersey pig.

When Isabel decided to raise a pig she wanted a Duroc-Jersey but she did not like the medium size type that she could secure at a fairly low cost not far from her home. She had her own money and she wanted to send and get one of the larger type that are being raised by M. Averhoff of Lebanon even though it would cost her $25.

After securing her father's consent, she sent for the pig. She and her brother, Thomas, raised their pigs side by side in the same pen. The brother, however, had one of the medium sized types of the Duroc-Jersey. Then came the state fair and brother and sister showed their pigs with the livestock club exhibits. Isabel carried off state championship in the third division of the Duroc-Jersey class. Isabel's pig was a little overweight which was the reason why a boy from another county scored a little higher on his pig than she did; but he failed to have his record complete and Isabel won the championship. The brother's pig did not win any prize. Isabel's pig had not only won a prize but won it over two pigs that were exhibited by the two Averhoff children of Lebanon. Her pig outclassed some of those raised from the same stock.

This championship pig was also placed in the open class but the fact that it was a little overweight kept it from winning a prize there. Isabel is going to remedy this defect, however, before the Pacific International Livestock exposition next fall.

Raising livestock has not prevented Isabel Newlands from learning the things that girls should know. She has had one year of cooking and two years of sewing so it cannot be said that she is not interested in the things that other girls are interested in. Such a girl is bound to make a success at whatever she undertakes.

Just a word should be said explaining one of the reasons why Isabel and Thomas Newlands are so successful in raising pigs. Their father stands back of them and encourages them to complete their projects. Mr. Newlands attended the state fair this year and was just as interested in inspecting the stock to see how it should be taken care of and gotten ready for the fair as the club children were. The Newland family lives in Lusted district.

POTATO INSPECTION RESULTS GIVEN

The preliminary report of the results of the first field inspection in potato certification has been sent out by the Agricultural College. There were 2912.76 acres entered for certification by the 16 counties in the state. Of this number 1287.84 passed inspection and 1648.92 were rejected. There were 58 growers in Multnomah county who entered with 185.75 acres of potatoes. Of this number 44.63 passed inspection and 141.12 acres were rejected. In Clackamas county 40 growers entered with 253.50 acres. There were 73.50 acres that passed inspection and 180 were rejected.

Many other counties were very successful in the work. Umatilla county had 865.50 acres of potatoes entered and 553.50 passed inspection. Some counties having a small number of acres entered secured a good acreage. Union county had the lowest results with 103.5 acres and only one-half an acre passed the inspection.

Potato Starch Man Visits Gresham. J. F. Griffith, of Portland, and another man who is said to be interested in the manufacture of starch from potatoes were in Gresham a few days ago investigating the possibilities of using the plant here for the refining of crude starch brought from other localities.

An effort will be made to interest potato growers of Idaho and other places in the project. It is explained that the grinding and washing can be done with comparatively inexpensive machinery in localities where potatoes are grown to a large extent, and the crude or green starch can be brought here for the finishing processes.

NOTICE. Certain notorious liars have been circulating a lie, that my two houses at the corner of 4th and Hood streets were constructed of an old barn. The public is warned that all such statements are lies. Not a piece of second hand material was used. Contractor L. J. Winters built one and I constructed the other one. JOE MELUGIN.

Rotate Land for Strawberries. Serious strawberry root infesting insects make it inadvisable to grow strawberries more than two full crop years on the same land. Plow the fields in the fall subsequent to harvesting the second crop of strawberries and use the land in a rotation for crops other than strawberries for at least a three-year period.

The best wheats to grow in eastern Oregon fall plantings according to the experiment station recommendations at the state fair are turkey red and hybrid No. 128. For western Oregon fall planting white winter, foisy and pink are the varieties. All these have been tested by the station and farmers.
