TROUTDALE LIBRARY OPENS READING ROOM

Troutdale was one of the first small towns in Oregon to have a library. The Woman's club, under the presidency of Mrs. Aaron Fox, founded, financed and maintained it for some years before it was taken over by the Multnomah county library in 1908 and made a part of the county system. The opening of the new library room Thursday was largely due to the efforts of these same women, who, when the building which had housed the library was sold this fall, succeeded in obtaining a new location for it in the city hall.

Old residents of Troutdale will be interested in seeing the picture of the original library room which Miss Fox has loaned to the new reading room.

At the informal program at the opening on Thursday afternoon Mrs. Aaron Fox presided and Mrs. Clara Larsson, acting as hostess, served tea. Speeches were made by Miss Anne Mulheron, head librarian; Miss Nelly Fox, supervisor of the county department; Mrs. Aaron Fox and Robert Sabin of the library board.

Miss Gladys Betts, the station's librarian, had displayed on the shelves a most interesting group of new books, which include the following titles:

Bradford: "American Portraits." More interesting than fiction and already more talked about than the average novel. Mr. Bradford is master of a clear and distinguished style and his dry humor holds the reader's attention without observing the high critical quality of his work.

Charwood, Lord: "Abraham Lincoln." An Englishman's picture of Lincoln, the Lincoln of failures and successes, patience and modesty, and eloquence so simple and magnificent.

Greenbie, M. B.: "In the Eyes of the East." A very personal book of travel in which the story of the author's romantic courtship and marriage is told, along with her impressions of the Orient.

Kartini: "Letters of a Javanese Princess." These present a vivid picture of Javanese life and manners written in all the splendour of youth. Kartini lived to see her fondest hopes fulfilled for the women and children of Java.

Lewisohn, Ludwig: "Up Stream." Life story of a German Jew who came to America in early boyhood and grew up in a small southern town. A penetrating analysis and criticism of American life.

Mayo, Katherine: "Mounted Justice." No fiction could be more thrilling—all the suspense and excitement of detective stories is found in these authentic cases of the Pennsylvania state police who have traced crime and brought the criminals to justice.

Post, Emily: "Etiquette." Blue book of social usage. Every detail is explained from the selection of the visiting card to the mystery of eating.

Sullivan, Mark: "The Great Adventure at Washington." An understandable account of the arms conference at Washington vividly and dramatically told with keen insight into the characters and personalities of the chief participants.

Tarkington, Booth: "Alice Adams." Won the Pulitzer prize in 1922 for the novel which gives the truest depiction of modern American life.

Wright, Richardson: "Truly Rural." This book should do much to make the courageous move and to keep the fainthearted where they belong in the kitchenette with its adjoining cubby holes.

LYNCH

Lynch Parent-Teacher association will give a pie social at the schoolhouse on Friday evening, March 23, to which all members and friends are invited. The ladies will bring the supply of pies which the men are expected to buy. Dancing and the usual good time will be in evidence.

MONEY IS NOT WEALTH --- BUT

When stored in the banks of the country, forms a basis of credit that is of material advantage to you and the community in which you live. The money which is held in hiding or carried in the pocket is of no benefit to any one. One might as well expect returns from the iron and copper ore or gold nuggets stored in the depths of the earth. It is said that statistics show that if all the unnecessary money carried in pockets were properly invested the returns therefrom would pay all of our taxes. Provide yourself with a check book and pay by check rather than with cash. Check books furnished free.

The Pearl Universal

This beautiful range has so many fine features that we hardly know just where to begin its description.

It is manufactured by Cribben & Sexton Co., who have made ranges since Heck was a pup.

It is of cast-iron body which insures a good baking range, has key-plate top, duplex grates and, best of all, it is all grey enameled, which makes it a beautiful range and easy to keep clean. We have one in our window and would be glad to show you its many fine points.
