EARLY INHABITANTS HAD EXCELLENT TEETH

Remarkable preservation of teeth in one of the skulls recently taken from the Albany, Oregon, mounds by University of Oregon geologists has led Dr. Edwin T. Hodge, professor of geology, to express his belief that the aborigines interred in the cemetery of the ancients on the banks of the Santiam river were not eaters of warm foodstuffs. The molars in the jawbone examined by Dr. Hodge, who has recently made a detailed study of the ancient men of Oregon, are worn very low, indicating that the remains are those of an aged human, but no traces of decay are visible.

Dr. Hodge has the opinion of dental experts to the effect that hot foodstuffs has a deteriorating reaction on the teeth of man. According to the geologist, it is a well-known fact that Indians found in America by early explorers had teeth remarkably preserved. It is probable, believes Dr. Hodge, that the aborigines of the Albany mounds used fire in the preparation of food, but since all the cooking was done in the open, the roughly prepared food cooled off before being eaten.

Close examination of the teeth in the Albany skulls reveals that the enamel edges are not jagged; a fact, in the opinion of Dr. Hodge, which indicated that the early man of Oregon was careful to exclude gritty material from his dinner dish.

Traffic Cop: "Say, you! Didn't you see me wave at you?"
Mirandy: "Yes, you fresh thing, and if my old man had a-seen you, he'd a-knocked you off your block!"

The lights were dim, the curtains down and two on the settee.
He: "Does your mother object to kissing?"
She: "Do you want to ring the whole family in on this party?"

GRESHAM LOCALS

Miss Lilah Hengstler escaped with a severe cut between her eyes when the car in which she was riding at Hood River on Sunday was struck by a Hood River garage man who was racing to his burning home. Both cars were badly damaged but the other occupants of the cars were not hurt. Miss Hengstler's cut resulted from her being thrown onto the edge of the windshield, which was partly open. The glass was not broken.

Important to Register Births.
"Do you know why it is important to see that all births are duly registered in accordance with the vital statistics law enacted by the general assembly of 1915?" asks Dr. Frederick D. Stricker, of the Oregon State Board of Health. Some of the more important reasons are:

As evidence to prove the age and legitimacy of heirs.

As proof of age to determine the validity of a contract entered into by an alleged minor.

As evidence to establish the right of admission to the professions, and in order to vote.

As evidence of legal age to marry.

As evidence to prove the claims of widows and orphans, under the widows and orphans pension law.

As evidence to determine the liability of parents for the debts of minors.

As evidence in the administration of estates, the settlement of insurance and pensions.

As evidence in the enforcement of laws relating to education and to child labor.

As evidence to determine the relations of guardians to wards.

As proof of citizenship.

As evidence in the claim for exemption from the right to jury and militia service.

There is hardly a relation of life, social, legal, or economic, in which evidence furnished by an accurate registration of births may not prove to be of the greatest value not only to the individual but to the public at large.

A recent investigation in a small town of less than 1000 population revealed 16 births none of which were registered. "Can you tell me why?"

Lettuce Set Out now.
The earliest head lettuce is grown to a state of solid heading in a cold frame. This crop, usually called frame lettuce, is much in demand in the spring and late fall. The plants invariably make fine solid heads. The time of setting the young plants in the field is usually in late February. The crop will begin to mature on or about April 15. O. A. C. The Outlook Offers You a Good House Plan

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Well planned firesafe construction is of the greatest importance in the building of a house, especially if it is a farm house, because of the lack of fire-fighting apparatus and the difficulty of controlling a blaze once started.

There are so many fire risks present in barns, machine sheds and other farm buildings and their inflammable contents that it is essential that the chance of fire should be reduced to a minimum. This house, designed by agricultural experts, represents the best modern ideas in planning the arrangement of the American farm house.

In addition to the usual living room, large dining room and kitchen, there is a convenient farmer's office on the ground floor. A fireplace has been introduced in the end of the living room with book shelves on each side. A grade entrance leads down to a large basement wash room and laundry. A large space is set aside for a vegetable cellar. This should be sufficiently walled in to keep an even temperature so that low temperatures will not destroy the fruit and other foods that have been placed therein for safe keeping.

Upstairs are three bed rooms, cross ventilated, and the usual bathroom. All of the rooms contain large-sized closets, and the many windows allow more than the usual amount of daylight.

The roomy front porch makes a delightful resting place in the twilight at the close of the long day. A south or east exposure is best for this building. It will be liked by others aside from the farmer, and where the ground floor office is not desired it can be thrown into the living room, giving a fine room the width of the house.

Altogether it is the most practical of houses. It has an exterior that is in the best of taste; it is suitable for town or suburban builders as well as for farmsteads.

The above house plan was designed by the Extension Division, College of Agriculture, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

ROAD MAKING A DAY BY DAY JOB.

Every man is a road-maker. He builds the road over which he himself is to travel. If he is careless and insincere his road will be poorly made and he will find himself stalled in the soft mud of indifference. If he be sincere and diligent he will make a highway over which he can travel far.

The Ancient Romans built, with much labor, the famous Appian Way. To do this they laid end to end great, heavy, flat stones. Time shifted the great blocks of the Appian Way; they were not laid upon a strong bed of little stones.

Many centuries later a Scotchman by the name of McAdam found a better way to build an enduring road. McAdam accepted for his road only very little stones—stones that would slip between his thumb and first finger. The little stones could shift, they could settle and as they shifted and settled the "macadam" road became firmer and better.

The life road-maker who makes surest of his future lays his road bed in daily deeds of good rather than by seeking only to lay down the large blocks of ambitious performance.

The man who gets more out of life and he who gives most to life is the man who sees the good in little things—who learns how to use little things—who neglects or despises no detail and who builds his life road constantly and insistently with little deeds well done.

Measure the deeds of any great man and you will find his achievements have grown out of an experience of doing the small things with patience and painstaking fidelity.

The man of moral courage does not reach his moral power by one full leap; it is a matter of road-making; he acquires his moral strength step by step.

The architect who conceives the great cathedral or the monumental tower has first learned to use the square and the sweep; he has learned the mathematical laws that govern the stress and distribution of weight; he has built his road step by step and over it he has reached the thing of strength and beauty.

The road that is without a firm foundation is not the road of an enduring civilization. Soft clay carries no commerce. The road of least resistance is the road that retards progress—that holds back the traveler who would use it. Each day we lay the foundation for the road we are to travel tomorrow.

Life's prizes are not gifts; they are goals; they must be won; we must build the road over which we are to pass to reach them.
