SUGGESTIVE HINTS TO POULTRY RAISERS

By M. J. BRUGGER.

"Chicks must be properly fed from the start if they are to develop into vigorous stock," says H. E. Cosby, extension specialists in poultry husbandry at O. A. C.

"Just before the chick is hatched the yolk of the egg is absorbed into the body of the chick and supplies food for the first 48 hours. The first requirement of the chick after hatching is heat, so give it food that supplies heat and energy as well as the elements needed for bone and muscle."

Newly hatched chicks may be fed with good results during the first week three times daily on a chick food containing three pounds each of cracked corn, cracked wheat, pin-head oatmeal or steel cut oats, and one pound of fine grit. A mash of equal parts of bran shorts and corn meal mixed with eggs, or rolled oats with eggs, is recommended twice daily. Sour milk or buttermilk is fed in addition. Grit and charcoal are provided in hoppers, and the chicks are given green feed once a day.

No grain or mixture of grains supplies the various elements of food necessary for normal chick development. Chick grains are supplemented with muscle forming foods derived from an animal source, such as meat scraps.

Vitamines are necessary to growth. These elements are found chiefly in milk, eggs, and the leafy parts of plants.

"The amount of weight taken on by young chicks when properly fed is remarkable," says Mr. Cosby. "At 12 weeks of age a normal chick will have increased its weight about 25 times. Thus, if proper feeding methods are used, there must be a bountiful profit in raising young chicks."

R. F. D. Patrons Must Have Names.

No longer will the patrons of rural route mail service be known by number. The Postoffice department at Washington has issued a ruling that they must be known by name. "Attention is called," the announcement states, "to the fact that the numbers assigned to rural mail boxes are not to appear upon them." It emphasizes the necessity of having the name of the head of the family served by the mail box painted in plain letters on the box.
