DOING ONE'S DUTY.

The word duty is either a harsh or a sweet word according to one's attitude of mind. To one it is the lash of a hard taskmaster, to another it is the urge of a kind friend who has our present and future welfare at heart.

To the unwilling person, who is out of harmony with his surroundings and conditions of life, the suggestion of duty arouses a spirit of rebellion and the performance will be perfunctory and joyless. The one who is in harmony with a supreme will which determines our obligations will say, "What wilt thou have me to do?" and will be glad in the performance of that which is known to be right and best.

Man's first and supreme duty is to his maker and next to his fellow man. His obligations to each are so related and united that he cannot fulfill one without fulfilling the other. He serves his fellowman by serving God and he serves God by serving his fellow man. Man also owes a duty to himself, inasmuch as he cannot meet the prescribed conditions of his existence without doing what is right and necessary by himself.

Only the mental balance and heart poise that come from prayerful conviction can keep one going steadily, joyfully on in this threefold path of duty. The lines of duty may often cross our lines of personal pleasure but they should not cross our line of true happiness for our greatest joy should be to do our duty.

Discouragement often comes because someone doesn't praise us for doing our duty. Praise helps, but the inner satisfaction of duty gladly done is worth more than the praise of man.

Duty may sometimes lay on us difficult tasks but the outcome if we try always spells success while neglect of duty inevitably spells failure in life.

The rain may rain but there should be no rain on the reign of good cheer.

Vacation time is here but not camping weather.

If you have worked hard the rest of the year you are entitled to a vacation some time during the summer.

The June roses have been in their prime this year, but June doesn't end the rose season in Oregon.

Typhoid Fever.

The following information is furnished by the Oregon state board of health:

Typhoid fever is sometimes called autumnal fever because of the fact that the greatest number of cases of the disease are reported in the fall. The disease may become epidemic at any season of the year where there is gross neglect of the water and milk supplies that have a large number of common users as in cities. Epidemics of this character, however, have become rare within the last decade. The most recent one occurred about three years ago in Salem, Ohio. The type of typhoid that is always a source of worry during the summer and fall is usually called sporadic or endemic, that is the occurrence of one or two cases in localities over a large area and most of them being derived from different sources of infection. In Oregon this type of typhoid begins to increase with the advent of May, gradually increases and reaches the maximum during the month of October.

The typhoid bacillus is distinctly of human origin. The organism does not live and multiply in any other animal. There are always among our population people who are typhoid carriers. About one per cent of all those people who have typhoid fever and recover remain typhoid carriers for indefinite periods of time. Cases of 40 years duration are on record. Such people are capable of causing typhoid in others if they are careless in their personal habits, and more especially if they are food handlers when you are going to shake hands with a typhoid carrier, eat food prepared by one or drink water that has been polluted with the discharge from some guilty of gross carelessness. All these dangers are very greatly increased during the warm weather when we eat raw foods, are out of doors hunting, fishing, and camping. Then, too, the typhoid bacillus is very much more prevalent during the warm season because it multiply much more rapidly in warm weather.

Much of the typhoid fever is contracted during vacation outings and picnics. The season for outdoor vacations is over with the month of October and then the number of cases of typhoid reported takes a sharp drop of nearly 100 per cent for November and then gradually decline until the next May.

The first precaution in the prevention of this type of typhoid is vaccination. Two weeks' time is required to complete the vaccination, three doses being required at intervals of one week. Why take a foolish risk when you can protect yourself at a little inconvenience? Even though you are vaccinated it is not advisable to drink from streams and springs unless you are certain of their purity. The protection from vaccination is of three years' duration only. The immunity from vaccination received by those who were in the army needs renewing. Do not put it off!

Farmers Mutual Fire Relief Assn. Does Flourishing Business.

The Farmers Mutual has grown to be the largest farmers' company in the Northwest. Farmers who consider their own welfare prefer it. President Snashall reports the Association has over $16,000,000 in force and over 10,000 members. In the past year it has paid over $33,000 in losses with one assessment only at 30c per hundred dollars. There is no reason why farmers should pay high rates when they can insure in a Farmers' Association. Anyone wishing to insure will call on H. W. Snashall at the Fair Grounds, Gresham.
