BOOZE AND THE FOURTH.
Gresham has proved the lie. The statement has frequently been made by supporters of the liquor interests, that booze is an absolute necessity; that a day such as the Fourth, for instance, could not be fittingly celebrated without something wet to trickle down one's throat and keep one's spirits high.

Bosh!

The lie was proved when Gresham celebrated the Fourth. Not an intoxicated man was seen anywhere. The crowd was orderly to a fine point. Everybody had a good time. Everybody went home happy. And—
There was no booze and no drunks.

THAT PRIZE FIGHT.
There is a big, black splotch on the fair fame of the state of Montana. It was put there on the one day in the year when everything should be kept clean, white and patriotic.

There was nothing patriotic in the brutal prize fight between Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons. There can hardly be anything patriotic expected in-so-far as Dempsey is concerned. Everybody remembers his war record, if "war record" it can be called.

Sports, when of a clean, wholesome nature, such as baseball games, races, water events and the like are a splendid way in which to help celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence. But is prize fighting? Prize fighting is wrong at any time but especially on such a day.

Nobody has any objection to boxing. It's a wonderful science. Boxing for points is as clean as lawn tennis or checkers. Prize fighting is a cat of another hue.

Here is what we have. Two men, strong, rugged, healthy. They have signed up to see which one can beat the head off the other first. It is a case of bull strength and endurance. There is nothing remarkably scientific about it; it's just a slam, bang affair with the participants seeking to knock out the other.

In this shameful affair at Shelby, Montana, there was a world's championship, so-called, at stake. One man fought fairly for it, so all accounts say, while the champion, he of the none too white war record, battled as he was expected to do. Dempsey was dirty in his tactics. He continually fouled but his hand picked referee did not see any of his violations of the rules.

Prize fighting is like bull fighting. It is brutal to the core and without a redeeming feature. But prize fights probably will be held as long as the world lasts. In justice and in the name of decency, let it be asked that such a day as July Fourth be not desecrated again by a fiasco of this sort.

PLEASANT VALLEY
A delightful evening dancing party was enjoyed Saturday night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Springer, who had invited their wide circle of neighbors and friends to "come and eat a piece of little Sammy's birthday cake" and judging from all the cakes at the tasty lunch it would seem as if everybody must have brought him one. Little Sammy was born on Fourth of July, but the birthday occasion was celebrated in advance in view of the national holiday with its outings and fireworks and, in spite of the hot weather, over a hundred guests danced until a late hour and departed with the invitation to come again in two weeks and bring their friends.

Preaching services will be held on Sunday evening at the Pleasant Valley church by the pastor, the Rev. E. G. Ranton.

HALEY
The pastor, Rev. Andrew Johnson, will speak next Sunday at the Haley Baptist church on the subject, "The Gospel and the Baptism of the Holy Spirit." This will be a comparison between the gospel and the modern pentecostal movement, showing that this movement is placing emphasis on non-essentials. Speaking with tongues will also be touched upon. All welcome.

The Haley Baptist church held a very successful picnic on the Fourth in the Larson grove. About 300 people were gathered all day. In the forenoon a program was rendered consisting of songs, speeches and patriotic readings. In the afternoon sports, including a baseball game, were had. Portland parties placed a radio receiving set on the grounds and President Harding's address was heard by all.

The old-timers who sigh for the old-fashioned girls of their youth would wish their heads off if they'd see one of them coming down the street dressed as the girls did in the nineties.

HARDING BELIEVES WE SHOULD JOIN COURT

soul, to give its support to this fine program of maintaining peace throughout the world."

The President declared his belief in destiny, saying, "I myself believe in destiny. I believe the destiny of this new world republic was written by an infinite hand in the consciousness of divine intent. How else could he have explained the marvel of American founding and development?"

Transportation was touched upon briefly, the President summarizing the situation as follows:

"We are confronted with no greater problem than transportation, both by rail and water. Only national solution is possible. You can have no merchant marine if that problem be left to those states alone which border the salt seas; you can hope for no inland waterways where the states directly interested are to assume the cost; and the railway problem is especially national in scope, and only a federal plan will provide an ample solution."

Touching on the topic of the two contending schools of American politics, the speaker declared that "the broader viewpoint is not limited to defense alone because we mean so to deport ourselves and so appeal to the honor, love and justice among others, that we shall never be called again to wage armed warfare."

Taking up immigration, President Harding emphasized the statement that "I prefer waiting jobs to idle men and I choose quality rather than quantity in future immigration."

Continuing he said, "This land of ours has little to fear from those who attack from outside our borders, but we must guard very zealously against those who work within our borders to destroy the very institutions which have given them hospitality."

A republic worth living in is worth living for and a republic worth defending is worth our patriotic vigilance, so that it shall not be undermined by those who preach the gospel of envy and hate, or would destroy in experiments against which 40 years of human experience cry out in protest.

"One hundred and forty-seven years ago today the inspired fathers proclaimed the American freedom, on which our people have builded to the wonder and astonishment of the world. Let us duly resolve today, my fellow Americans, that in our grateful appreciation, it shall be sacredly preserved."

In closing, President Harding said: "It is easy to conceive, my countrymen, that the hundred millions of today will be the myriads of the future. I like to think of a republic of freedom clinging to the fundamentals which made us what we are: The even distribution of justice, a fair distribution of the fortunes of life—not equal. I never preach that, because equal there would not be an inspiration to achieve. God Almighty never intended that. But I do want a fair distribution of the fortunes of life; I want to maintain American opportunity; I want this Republic of ours to go on. I would like to think, my countrymen, of the future when those myriads of Americans shall have their faces to the front, as we have ours today; when they gather about the camp fires of an onward marching army of peace, gathering at the camp fires at night, rejoicing in the accomplishments of the day and singing from their hearts at night time until you hear echoing to the heavens the song of the American heart, of glory to God in the highest and peace on earth, and good will to men!"
