Mark Twain

Reached the top of the ladder. His name is known the world over. But he started at the bottom. His father died when he was 12 and "Mark" was "bound out" as an apprentice. As he laughingly said later, "I got more board than clothes and very little of either."

He was a hard worker. Score one.

At 18 he went to New York and got work at $4 a week and saved 50 cents of it. Score two.

Hard work and thrift were the secrets of his success.

How many young men of today save 12½ per cent of their earnings.

$26 a year saved for 40 years amounts to $2,569.50—a home, a garden and money in the bank.
