A Wise Old Crow

Once upon a time a crow passed through a desert and was almost overcome with thirst. Suddenly he spied a pitcher half full of water but his joy turned to despair as he discovered the water too low for his beak to reach.

A money-bag lay near, and the wily old crow began dropping the coins one by one into the pitcher. After much labor the water level mounted to where he could reach the water and he slaked his thirst—and saved his life.

By dropping coins in the family savings bank, many a man has accumulated sufficient funds to see him through many a bad situation safely. If you are not saving, better start today.
