BUILDING HOME INDUSTRIES.

"No man liveth to himself." What the good book says of the individual is true also of the community, the town, the city. Isolation leads to desolation and death.

To develop strength and promote growth there must not be dissipation of resources. There must be cultivation as well as conservation of the sources of energy. All plant life, all physical life, starting with its inherent impulse, must develop from within by utilizing the necessary vitalizing elements from without.

A community to progress must possess an inherent life which must be developed by contact with outside forces which it also helps to vitalize by such contact.

A community must attract and build into itself certain life-giving elements and it must also impart its life impulses to surrounding communities.

This is what makes the difference between a "live" town and a "dead" one. It is the essential difference between life and death.

It is the working out of this principle that has built up our great cities and made prosperous our country communities.

When a community produces something that other communities need it is developing its life, and at the same time increasing its needs to satisfy which it must draw from others. And under healthy conditions the circle ever widens.

This is one of the best reasons for patronizing home industries. There must be home industry to start with as it is patronized it must grow, as it grows other industries within an ever widening area will feel the stimulus and be benefited thereby.

To patronize home industry does not mean to limit one's patronage to that which is nearest but to patronize that first and make it prosperous.

Our needs are so many and so diversified that if every person in supplying his needs will give preference to the industry nearest him, especially that which will help his own community most, he will find prosperity knocking at his door.

PRIVATE GIFTS NEEDED.

"State universities need gifts from private sources as well as support from taxation," says Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, in a message to Prince L. Campbell, president of the University of Oregon.

Secretary Hoover believes that private gifts must supplement legislative support if the state universities are to keep pace with the constantly growing demands made upon them. "I was glad to hear that the University of Oregon is seeking $5,000,000 in gifts from its alumni and the general public" says Secretary Hoover, who is a native of Oregon. "It is almost impossible for our state universities to perform their functions to the community if they are to rely upon taxation alone. The increasing demand for higher education and the complete necessity for competently fulfilling this demand can only be met if people with means are prepared to make large and generous contributions. I need not argue the cause of education. There is no person in the United States over 10 years old who requires conviction in this matter."

In commenting on this message President Campbell said that the state universities of the country are facing a crisis because of increasing numbers. "We must not succumb to this flood of new students," he said. "We must stand against it and refuse to 'wholesale' education. If necessary we must spend all our money for purposes of instruction in order to keep the old standards and the old personal contacts between student and teacher. It is positively criminal to take the students out of preparatory school and immerse them in the vast machine of a 'wholesale' university. It means an appalling waste of the most valuable material in the world—human material. At the University of Oregon we have been compelled to use our income for teaching and we look to our alumni and friends to raise funds for our immediate building needs."

TAX REDUCTION IS IN DANGER.

President Coolidge is now fighting to save the whole program of tax relief and to stop the most formidable raids ever launched against the United States treasury. He is trying to cut government costs, stop the waste of taxpayers' money, and insure tax reduction.

Congress is trying to increase government expenses, waste more national revenue and day by day is strangling tax relief. It is shaping a tax measure that will fall hundreds of millions short of raising revenue enough for current needs. At the same time, it passes bill after bill increasing government costs.

It passed the Bursum Omnibus Pension bill adding $415,000,000 to the load in the next 10 years. Also the bonus, with its estimated total of $4,000,000,000. A House committee has approved a postal pay raise of $70,000,000 a year. In the senate the Farm Bloc is pushing the $200,000,000 McNary-Haugen bill. There are others to follow.

If our national law-makers would take the trouble to read their home state papers from the rural districts, they would see the unqualified demand for tax reduction and condemnation, of the political tactics being employed in Washington in an effort to serve selfish interests preceding and election.

Services will be held at the usual hours on Sunday at the community church. Portland musicians will furnish special music. The ladies of the church are planning a bazaar for June 19.

The Cottrell Parent-Teacher association will hold its annual picnic on Wednesday, June 4.

Mrs. J. D. Jonsrud of Sandy and Mrs. V. A. Heacock of Rickreall spent Monday with Mrs. S. B. Splawn.

Several friends surprised Mrs. Wm. Booth and Mrs. John Brophy on Wednesday evening. About 25 were present and a delightful evening was spent. Lunch was served.

AVOIDING LOSS IN HANDLING CANE FRUITS

In picking, three fingers always should be used; very few berries should be held in the hand at one time; the berries always should be placed, not dropped, into the basket or cup; all decaying, overripe, and injured berries should be discarded, no after handling of the berries in the basket for any purpose should be allowed.

Time of Picking—Time of picking depends primarily upon the use to which the fruit is to be put. It must be borne in mind, however, that cane fruits develop their highest sugar content and best quality when allowed to ripen naturally on the vines.

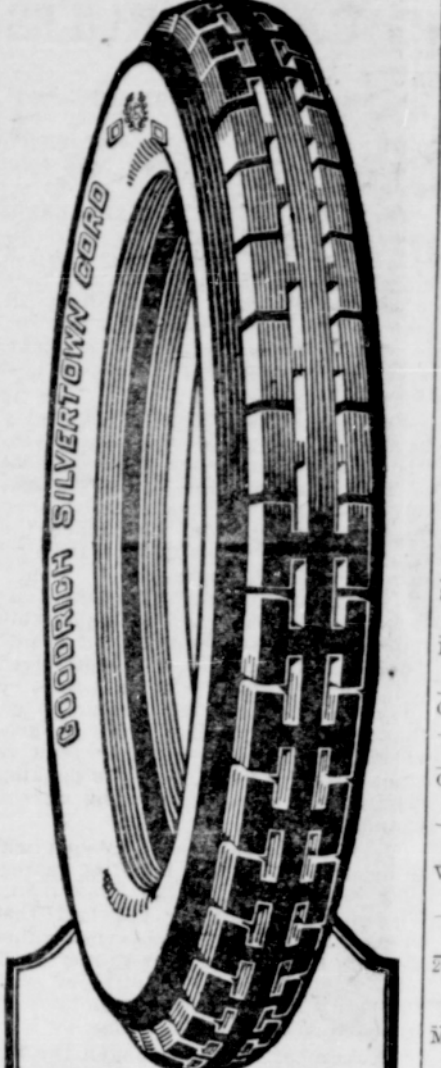

Loganberries in Oregon begin ripening between June 15 and July 1, and last until August 1, and August 10, depending upon the season and locality. When destined for the fresh fruit market, loganberries should be picked while firm but of good red color. In a properly matured condition they will part from the stems readily and without the necessity of severe pressure from the picker's fingers. When intended for the cannery they should be picked while still firm but after they have thoroughly ripened. While they become sweeter and better flavored if left on the vines until fully ripe, they should not be allowed to become soft as fruit in this condition will break up in processing.

Fruit picked as for the fresh fruit trade will make a prettier canned product but will be much more acid than that which has been allowed to ripen two or three days longer. Loganberries for drying purposes should be of good purple color but should not be soft. When intended for juice, loganberries should be allowed to ripen thoroughly on the vines. Berries in this condition not only give a greater quantity of juice, but they produce a juice of better quality.

Red raspberries for the fresh fruit market should be harvested when fairly ripe but still firm. For the canneries they may be allowed to ripen thoroughly on the vines. Red raspberries, however, should not be allowed to remain on the vines after maturity, as they ferment readily and soon become worthless.

Black raspberries are less perishable, and for all purposes may be allowed to ripen fully before harvesting. In some sections where blackcaps are handled as a dried product they are even allowed to dry on the vines. Evergreen blackberries, even though intended for long distance shipping, should be thoroughly ripe at picking time. The small dimple or depression at the apex of each droplet should be completely filled up, this being indication that the berry has attained full size and maturity.
