THE OREGON SPORTSMAN.

Volume one, number one, of The Oregon Sportsman comes to the editor's desk. It is started as a new publication but is really the revival of a former magazine published by the State Game commission and suspended six years ago.

Editorially the purpose of the magazine is thus stated: "It is for you, Mr. Sportsman, that the game commission has taken on the additional obligation of putting out this periodical, and as stated the real success of the magazine, as the success of every other department of the game commission's affairs, depends largely upon the loyal, constructive support given it by those concerned in its success or failure."

The Political Review has been started, supporting the republican party in the country, state, county and city. It is a small magazine edited by Charles E. Henshaw and O. P. Riley, and issued every Saturday in Portland. The issue we have seen, volume one, number one, is chock full of red hot suggestions to voters. It is clearly boosting Dr. George Parrish for mayor of Portland, and represents him as a "hustler" (as if "Our George" Baker wasn't). County Chairman John L. Day attributes the lack of interest in elections to the looseness of our political methods, the "go as you please" system of nominating now in effect. He would not return to the old convention as it was but he would have the central committees of both parties recommend a set of substantial candidates to represent the party without denying the right of others to run independent. The Review says it is the plain duty of every republican to vote to elect Coolidge for president, McNary for U. S. senator, Crumpacker for congress and Kay for state treasurer. This looks like a good ticket for republicans to unite on and that's all that is necessary to put it over.

JUSTICE CONFOUNDED BY YOUTH.

Judge Caverly's decision in the Leopold and Loeb case stands out as a milestone in the march of criminal procedure in this country. Indeed criminologists of note believe the decision has dealt a death blow to capital punishment from which it will not long be able to survive. It seems obvious in view of the court's refusal to sentence to death these two assassins on account of their youth that Illinois cannot well hang young Bernard Grant, only nineteen, who refused to plead guilty on promise of a 20-year sentence. He professed his innocence, went to trial and now stands in the shadow of the gallows as a result. Grant is poor, Loeb and Leopold had command of millions. This difference meant nothing except that it enabled the more aristocratic murderers to engage illustrious counsel, to pit the matchless reasoning power and the confounding logic of a Caverly, whereas in all likelihood Grant had to defend himself only an attorney of average attainment, certainly one far less able to analyze complex, reflex, mental reactions and other psychological factors that enter into lofter education and higher assassination. In the one case the mentality of the bar seemed to rise superior to the mentality of the bench. In the other the reverse was the fact.

The Grant case is now to be forced before the Illinois Board of Pardons. Consequently that body is face to face with a perplexing problem. Not to pardon Grant would seem unjust. To pardon him on the ground of his youth would be to bid every boy in the land to enter a career of crime without fear of punishment.

Much criticism has been heaped on Judge Caverly for his decision, but his gravest error seems to have been giving the youth of the murderers as his excuse for refusing to inflict the death penalty. This affects the whole society. In view of the situation the legislature should lose no time in changing the law as to make impossible the shifting of the shoulders of any one man a responsibility so great as that which beset Judge Caverly.

"It's harder to talk to you than to fly around the world," said Lieutenant Wade of the globe circlers at their reception in Seattle. Many of us when called on to address an audience feel the same way.

The round the world fliers are off by rail for Dayton, Ohio, where they are due on Thursday to take part in an aviation meet. Their proposed stop at Vancouver, Washington, on their return flight to California has been called off. They promise to come again—sometime.

JOHN M. MANN.

Mr. Mann has served several terms as city commissioner of Portland and announces his candidacy for re-election. He is one of the best known citizens of Multnomah county, a man of safe ideas, energy and fairness. Much of his management of the bureau of public utilities has relation to the county outside of Portland. While citizens of the county outside of Portland may not aid him by their votes they can and certainly will give him their encouragement and moral support.

John M. Mann, Portland city commissioner, in charge of the department of public utilities, announces that he is a candidate for re-election and he seeks the support of the voters of Portland on his record of business-like administration of the various bureaus under his management and fair dealing for the individual and the public in all matters coming before the attention of the city council.

"My constant endeavor has been to insure wholehearted service to the public," says Commissioner Mann in his announcement, and he pledges his best efforts to the duties of his office and a continuation of a broad-minded policy in the consideration of all public affairs.

"For the past seven years I have tried to faithfully serve the people of Portland, supporting measures for the general development of the city and raising my voice for the fair treatment of individuals on all occasions, doing my best to encourage industrial development of our great city in every way possible and particularly by refusing to lend support to any unnecessary municipal legislation which might hamper such development and at all times have applied business methods to the conduct of the bureaus of my department under my direct supervision as commissioner of public utilities.

"During my term of office the volume of business in the bureau of water works has grown steadily and the water system has been developed to a point of efficiency declared by representatives of the national board of fire underwriters to be one of the best in the United States.

"We have been able to weather the storm of abnormal war conditions and give the highest standard of service without increasing the water rates, an accomplishment, in view of this condition, equivalent to a material reduction in rates. Water has been used for all purposes and under such liberal regulations that until this season, the longest and driest for many years, (a general condition along the Pacific coast resulting in our case in our having 30 per cent less water in the watershed than any year of record for more than 30 years) in which restrictions were made resulting in inconvenience in some instances, saving large quantities of water which would otherwise be wasted, but allowing sufficient quantities of water for every need. Many other Pacific Coast cities were forced to adopt stringent curtailment of service and in some instances absolute prohibition of sprinkling. It is our fire protection facilities and allow an average daily consumption equivalent to that of San Francisco, which has twice our number of people.

"Development within the Bull Run reserve, the center of which forms our water shed, has resulted in placing all lands, which otherwise would have been thrown open to public entry, into the reserve and the purchase by us of lands privately owned before the reserve was created. Also in our ability to store in Bull Run lake approximately 3,000,000,000 gallons of water which can be controlled after the expenditure of approximately $100,000 (this amount of storage would cost several million dollars in Portland) and this storage would be ample for a number of years to come, except in case of extreme shortage of rainfall, as was experienced this past season.

"We have endeavored to acquaint our people with the fact that our water supply is as pure as it is possible to secure anywhere, not one drop being glacial water off of Mt. Hood. "In addition to the general development of the distribution system we are now constructing a third conduit from the Bull Run headworks to Mt. Tabor reservoirs, which, under the terms of the contract, will be completed by May 1925. This new conduit will replace No. 1, which has been in use for 30 years, which is the recognized life of such pipe, and insure carrying capacity for sufficient quantities of water for a materially increased population. We will, however, continue to use conduit No. 1 so long as that is possible. The carrying capacity of our conduits when No. 3 is completed, together with the storage facilities at Bull Run Lake and in the city, should continue to guarantee sufficient quantities of water, even though we should again experience the conditions of this present year, which have been unprecedented, but in order to be doubly safe we are now making preliminary surveys looking toward the provision of additional storage facilities within the reserve, which, when provided, will preclude any possibility of a shortage of water in the future.

"The bureau of health, including the isolation hospital, has used every effort to reduce sickness to a minimum and improve health conditions to a maximum. Our efforts have resulted in keeping the city comparatively free from disease and the milk standards have given us an enviable position relative to infant mortality, which has been the lowest, or next to the lowest of any city in the United States for a number of years.

"The street lighting has presented many difficult problems for the reason that our city has approximately five times the area of cities having two to four times our population, but with the limited available means it has been possible to place several hundred lights, over a period of years, particularly in the outlying districts.

"The bureau of weights and measures has done much to insure correct weights and measurements and is at the service of the community without charge in all instances.

"Believing that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and that, where possible, provision should be made for all our people to get out of doors, I have, with very little cost, established and now maintain Dodge Park, which needs no introduction to the public, since literally thousands of our people have made use of this beautiful spot. We will be glad when more of our people will avail themselves of the opportunity to visit Dodge Park, which is at their disposal without any charge for any service, which includes provision for cooking over large barge ovens, wood, Bull Run water, lavatories, bath houses, beach sports swimming and "first aid," if necessary.

"For 43 years it has been my privilege to be a resident of Portland, the last seven years of which have been spent serving its people, and during all of this time I have been intensely interested in the general development of our city. As a servant of the people it has been my purpose to take the viewpoint of the average taxpayer and citizen in every official act and believe in giving every possible service, on an economical basis, which the people desire and are willing to be responsible for. In this connection it has been my experience that most of our people are public spirited, have the interests of the community at heart, are courageous, being willing to undertake anything for our betterment; are charitable, being willing to give and take, and in most cases cooperate with their officials in a manner making possible the success of any department. These characteristics and attitude make it a pleasure to serve our city, and whatever success I have attained as commissioner of public utilities is due largely to the cooperation of our citizens and the employes in my department.

"I want to express my appreciation for the support of my friends in electing me to this term of office and if, as I had hoped, my service has held or increased their confidence, I will appreciate deeply a repetition of their valued assistance at the coming election on November 4th next. If re-elected I shall continue to conduct the duties of a city commissioner on the same basis as is shown by my record. "My motto has been and is, the Golden Rule."

Health Reminders

By Frederick D. Stricker, M. D.

SALT IS RECOMMENDED FOR GOITER TREATMENT

Iodized salt, to be used in household cooking the same as ordinary salt, is said to be a preventive of goiter and also effective in the treatment of beginning goiters. The sanitary effects of iodine in small amounts have been recognized for some time. The simple and comparatively inexpensive method of combining this needed element with common table salt has been worked out by the United States Public Health Service, collaborating with state boards of health. In a letter to the public Dr. Frederick D. Stricker gives out the following information:

"That the state of Oregon has an abnormally high per cent of individuals affected with goiter has been a matter of common knowledge for years, but only recently has any particular attention been given to it. Iodine is necessary for the proper function of the thyroid gland. When the storage of iodine in the thyroid gland gets below 0.1% the gland begins to enlarge and a goiter is formed. It has been shown beyond doubt that endemic goiter is due to a deficiency of iodine in the water and food in goiterous districts. It is also known that beginning goiters have frequently been made to disappear by the use of iodine. Goiter is prevalent in cattle, horses, sheep, hogs, and poultry of goiterous regions. A very small amount of iodine taken with the food prevents the development of goiter in these animals.

"Endemic goiter is definitely and easily preventable. Existing enlargement may be frequently caused to disappear through administration of some form of iodine. As to the form of iodine to be used, it should be low in cost and in a form that will insure its regular use. The chocolate iodine tablet taken once a week has been found convenient and palatable. This is the continuous method and is preferable to the saturation method of giving iodine once or twice a year. "Next to water, common salt is the most universally used article of food. Most salt brines from which salt is crystallized contain a small amount of iodine, but in the process of refining and crystallization the iodine is lost. Salt manufacturers are now placing on the market table salt containing iodine. A small quantity of iodine in the food will make children immune from simple goiter. Common salt is something that is used by everyone regularly. Salt is therefore an ideal medium for supplying iodine to children.

"The average person eats about seven pounds of salt a year and in order to furnish sufficient iodine .02% of sodium iodide has been added to common table salt. "There is no danger of causing ill effects by the use of iodized salt. Common table salt containing this quantity of sodium iodide is therefore recommended for the prevention of simple goiter. Simple goiter is a gland enlargement which can be prevented if treated in time."
