PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S RELIGION

Many persons are curious to know to what church the president belongs and they feel a little friendlier feeling toward him if he belongs to their denomination.

President Coolidge is a Congregationalist and is the first of that sect to become president. Of his 29 predecessors eight were Protestant Episcopal, eight Presbyterian, four Unitarian, three Methodist, two Reformed Dutch, one Disciple and one Baptist.

Calvin Coolidge was a faithful attendant at church from his childhood, but he did not assume full membership for the same conscientious reason, oddly enough, that deterred President Harding, most devout of men, namely, a sense of unworthiness to partake of the sacrament.

It was not until he had been president several months that Mr. Coolidge, to his complete surprise, was notified by the constituted authorities that he had been elected a member in full and regular standing of the First Congregational church of Washington. His known devotion to the ideals of Christ, supplemented by the purity of his own life, was held, in lieu of any testimony or profession from his lips, as fully justifying the rare, if not indeed unique, distinction thus bestowed. He was elected for what the independent church knew him to be.

On the bridge bond issue the Gresham precincts voted 422 for and 240 against. The vote on the amendments was as follows: Voters Literacy amendment, 393 for, 86 against; Public Use and Welfare amendment, 167 for, 127 against; Bonus amendment, 355 for, 202 against; Oleomargarine bill, 236 for, 390 against; Naturopath bill, 182 for, 283 against; Workmen's Compulsory Compensation bill, 143 for, 362 against; Income Tax repeal, 296 for, 271 against.

Coolidge says: "I do not favor a corporation government, a bank government, a farm government or a labor government. I am for a common-sense government by all the people according to the American policy and under the American constitution."

With two women governors elect it will not be long before a woman will be a candidate for the presidency. It might help to purify politics.

PLEASANT HOME

Fred B. Williams and Miss Eva B. Caddy were married on Monday, November 3, at the courthouse in Portland, by Judge George Stapleton.
