Entered as second-class matter March 2, 1911, at the Postoffice at Gresham, Oregon, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

Perhaps a turkey raised on the Billy Sunday place near Hood River wouldn't be any better than one equally well reared elsewhere but it might seem better because of the association. Doubtless President and Mrs. Coolidge enjoyed the 22-pound bird sent them by the evangelist for Thanksgiving.

It has been announced that the Hood River-White Salmon interstate bridge across the Columbia will be officially opened on December 6. A celebration will be held in honor of the event.

There were 1188 homesteaders on public lands in Oregon during the last fiscal year, according to report from the interior department. The detail number of acres entered was 246,000.

Various state departments occupying space in the state capitol building at Salem needed for legislature purposes have been notified by the secretary of state to seek other quarters early in December.

GRESHAM MEN ARE IN COLLISION TODAY

Fred Chalker and Carl Soderquist collided this morning in their machines as the former was on his way to Portland and Soderquist was traveling north on Wallula avenue. Fortunately no one was injured, although Chalker's machine was badly damaged.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Wallula avenue and the Section Line road. Chalker was going west toward Portland and had reached the corner as Soderquist came in from the south. The front of the latter's machine struck the back of the other car with the result Chalker's Ford touring car was turned completely over. The top of the auto was smashed, the steering wheel broken and a back wheel demolished. The only damage to the Soderquist car was a bent bumper.

Too Much Heat.

One of the most important predisposing factors to acute respiratory diseases is breathing hot, vitiated and dusty air. More people suffer from common colds than any other single ailment. The sum total of the inconvenience, complications, and economic loss resulting from common colds class these infections among the serious diseases. The prevention of colds consists, first, in avoiding people who have colds, and second, in guarding against the predisposing causes.

Avoid too much heat. Acustom yourself to healthful temperatures. If you would have red cheeks and clear eyes, sleep out of doors. The universal demand of the present day in human beings is efficiency. Anything that will increase efficiency is to be welcomed.

In general, cool moving air of a moderate, low humidity is more conducive to efficiency than a hot, humid, still air. Experts on ventilation have discovered that 68 degrees Fahrenheit gives the best results in working efficiency and personal comfort. A thermometer is absolutely necessary for determining the correct temperatures. Fresh air is essential for building and maintaining good health. Abundance of air should be assured by open window ventilation. A well designed window board will prevent drafts. Children who spend the entire day in a poorly ventilated school room are not given a fair chance for proper development.

Good ventilation is a big factor in the war on respiratory diseases. The good effect of open air life no longer demands proof. In disease as well as in health the effect is a general one on the body and not merely a question of breathing air. In this sense the open air is an air bath even when the body is clothed.

WASHINGTON BOY HOME FROM NEAR EAST

ALFRED MERRITT

Alfred Merritt, who has just returned to his home in Tacoma after three years service for the Near East Relief in Russian Armenia.

"Unless you have been over there and have seen thousands upon thousands of children gradually develop from practical savagery, to which they had been reduced, into happy useful self-supporting members of humanity you can never know what that country owes to America. The work is not finished yet but after this year should begin to diminish. With thousands of children still hungry in refugee camps this is no time to think of reductions or withdrawals."

"Ted Gannaway, a boy from Medford and Seattle, is busy distributing clothing in Greece. He pays the refugee women, many of them expert needlewomen, a few cents a day for making over the clothing. Then if a man is able to pay any price whatever he is expected to pay all that he can afford, although often only a few cents, for the clothing. We are determined not to pauperize these people, who, until a few years ago, were prosperous and self-respecting. So carefully does Ted Gannaway handle this clothing that he actually turns back a profit each month, a profit which is used for the purchase of food for the children of whom there are thousands and thousands hungry in Greece today.

"The same sort of miracles are wrought with old clothing across the Black Sea in the Russian Caucasus where about half of the expense of the work is met through contributions of old clothing from America. The Russian government pays a stated sum for these tons of clothing, and they are furnished to workers who make them over and put them in shape for sale to the bazaars or shops. Again the people are not pauperized for those who can pay, pay a small amount, and only the cases of the most desperate need receive free gifts."

"At present, Mr. Merritt says, the state of the Armenians is most unhappy. They are being forced out of Greece, and, as they are not allowed in Turkey or Russia, they have nowhere to go, but are gathered in refugee stations along the shores of the Mediterranean sea, waiting for the League of Nations to decide what is to be done with them. "Why the allies allowed the Turks to get off so easy is more than any of us can understand," he said, discussing the situation in the Levant. "That was certainly a most terrible mistake, and we have not begun yet to know how terrible it was."

ACHESON SURVEYS AMERICAN OPERATIONS

BARCLAY ACHESON

Barclay Acheson, well-known to many in Oregon and Washington because of years of residence in Chelalis, South Bend and Po. and, sailed from New York on November 5th, to continue his work as Director of Overseas Operations for the Near East Relief. Acheson has recently spent more than a year in the Near East, making careful survey of the different fields where American charity is caring for more than 50,000 children.

Speaking before clubs of Portland, Seattle and Tacoma business men, Acheson declared that the Near East Relief is coming into a new phase of work. "Except for Syria and Greece, there is little more than the normal amount of suffering in the Near East," he said. "It is true that the situation in those camps is desperate, and there are thousands of children there who will perish this winter simply because there are some folks in America who are getting tired of giving. Anyone who has ever seen the miracles that I have seen—homeless and hopeless, ragged children turned into happy, confident, healthy children—would never talk about being tired of giving."

"During the past year we saved 16,000 children from going blind and we trained hundreds of girls to go out as nurses to save the sight of other thousands of children, as well as to raise the health standards everywhere they go.

"Boys trained in modern methods of agriculture by Sam Newman of Seattle and Leonard Harthill of Corvallis, are revolutionizing the ideas of farmers who are securing twice their former crops by the use of these modern methods.

"Sometimes people say to me, 'Why don't these people do something for themselves?' And I wonder if they mean the children, some of whom begin as early as eight to help earn their own way.

"The Near East Relief is not giving aid to adult refugees except in the distribution of old clothing. And last year we gave help to 500,000 in this way. Our program is purely one of child-care, and as soon as our children are able to support themselves, our work will be finished. But these are children, mostly orphans, strangers in a strange land, with no claim whatever upon the governments who have given them a place to live."

Acheson declared that the Greek government is doing more to aid the refugees than all the relief agencies combined, and is spending more on them than on all governmental agencies combined.
