FARMER IS MADE THE GOAT.

Again the American farmer is to be made the goat.

Potash fertilizer is the most important of the artificial fertilizers used by the farmer. Germany is the principal source. The American product is almost inconsiderable but recently large deposits of potash it is claimed have been discovered at considerable depth in Texas and the government is undertaking to investigate the feasibility of making it available.

Authority for this statement is found in the Grange Bulletin of recent date which reads as follows:

An agreement between the German and Alsatian producers of potash to fix world prices and force the American farmer to pay high rates for artificial fertilizer has been signed at Paris.

DEATH IS DYING.

The two great mysteries of existence are birth and death, of these death is the greater mystery for birth admits of scientific study but death and the hereafter are closed fields so far as scientific investigation is concerned.

The biologist and the physician can tell why the processes of physical life cease but what death really means, why it is a phase of our existence and what it leads to or prepares for, are beyond his knowledge.

But we believe our caption is true, "Death is Dying." It isn't as fearsome as it used to be. Life is being lengthened and made happier and death is defeated in many a bout and delayed in its final and inevitable victory.

THINK!

It is a great thing to be the originator of an idea that sets people to thinking. Next to that is commendability to grasp another's idea and put it to good use.

State Grange Master George A. Palmeter, in his message to grangers in the May 27 Bulletin, closes with this paragraph:

In reading the Kansas Grange paper, I saw an article from the master of that state, in which he said that in visiting a grange he noticed they had a motto which was the one word "THINK" and I just wonder if it wouldn't be a good motto for all grangers. It has untold possibilities. THINK.

What a different world this would be, how different the lives of most of us, if only we kept that idea before us!

'Tis a Good Old World.

'Tis a good old world, though we sometimes say That its paths are rather hard, For the sunlight shines on the rock-leaf way, And never a soul is barred From the bright white road that leads to peace, Through the valley and up the hill, Where the din is hushed and the clamors cease— 'Tis a good old world, if we will.

'Tis a good old world, though you and I Might make it better yet If we'd care for the woes of another, and try Our own little woes to forget. If we'd straighten the lives that are rather askew, And sacrifice even of ease, But really, you know, there are many who do— 'Tis a good old world if you please, —Edgar S. Nye.

Fireproofing the Body. Each year we lose thousands of valuable trees by fire. In spite of all the precautions we can take, and all the quarantining of fires we can do, fires will break out in spots and wipe out whole forests.

Suppose we had some easy, cheap way of fireproofing these trees without hurting them? If somebody came along and told us that within a week he would give each of our trees a coat of fireproofing that would last for years, and perhaps for his life—would we have him do it? Of course we would! We'd be insane not to.

Then, after all our forests were fireproofed, would we continue the fireproofing on the young trees, and renew on those from which it had worn off? Equally of course NOT. We would say that, since we fireproofed, there had been no fires—therefore there was no use in fireproofing any more. Somebody would maintain that the fireproofing made a little mark on the bark of the trees, and that, since there were no more fires anyway, there was no use keeping up such a nonsensical and dangerous procedure as fireproofing. So that we'd gradually allow our new forests to grow up un-fireproofed.

Then, of course, the fires would start up again. Little ones and big ones—depending on the number of unprotected trees and the strength of the wind. Old trees, whose fireproofing was almost worn off, and who would have been safe in a small fire, would be burnt up in the tremendous conflagration caused by the many new and unprotected trees. And we would probably blame the fireproofing! Every time a fire occurred we would get scared, and protect a few trees, but as soon as the fire was under control we'd think that there would never be another one, and stop.

That's smallpox vaccination! Formerly, smallpox was as prevalent, and one was as certain to get it, as measles or chickenpox. Therefore, as soon as vaccination was found to prevent it, almost everybody was immediately protected. The result of this was that smallpox almost disappeared, and nobody was afraid of it any more. Therefore, we stopped vaccinating, thinking there would never be any more danger. Of course, there IS danger; virulent outbreaks of smallpox are now occurring all around us, and cases sometimes come into Oregon. Whenever there is a scare, we get vaccinated. Otherwise, we leave it alone, forgetting that the only way to remove the danger entirely is to keep ourselves vaccinated all the time. If everybody were vaccinated once, we would have no more smallpox epidemics, though we might have a few mild cases in people whose immunity had worn down. When much of the population is unvaccinated, a severe outbreak will attack those whose vaccination is old, and who otherwise would have had resistance enough to go through life without developing smallpox.

Something to Think About. This country is using up its timber four times as fast as it is growing. This rate of drain is not likely to decrease. In fact, economic studies point to the conclusion that, although our per capita consumption is declining, our wood requirements will increase from year to year with the increase in population.

Bright sayings by modern thinkers are found in the want column.

Costly Distribution. It costs more to carry a sack of potatoes from the train to a store in New York City than it does to ship the sack, 1100 miles by railroad.

The farmer raises the calf, weans it, feeds it, feeds and milks the grown cow, and gets for the milk a quarter of the money paid by the person that drinks the milk.

You can bring freight across the Atlantic or Pacific ocean for less than it costs to take it across the North river in New York City.

The curse of business is the high cost of distribution. Production we understand, but in distribution we are as backward as Fiji Islanders, says Arthur Brisbane.

A New Charity

Wm. H. Luden, wealthy manufacturer of Reading, Pa., has found a new way to spend money. All employees in his business enterprises who have children in school now receive a bonus equivalent to what the children could earn when they are kept in school after reaching the age of 14.

SEVERAL INJURED IN SUNDAY ACCIDENTS

Several Rockwood residents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Couey and daughter, Mrs. C. B. Johnson and Miss Gladys Way, were in an automobile traveling south on Park street Sunday morning, when they were struck by a Portland car driven by H. S. Finley and injuries were inflicted upon Mrs. Couey and her daughter which resulted in their removal to the emergency hospital in a Red Cross ambulance. No arrests were made, Finley settling the matter satisfactorily with the Couey family.

An accident occurred at Sandy Sunday which caused the injury of Mrs. E. Hill of Portland, she suffering three fractured ribs and injuries to one arm and her back. Mrs. Hill was in a machine driven by her brother, J. I. Crofts, and they were crowded off the highway into the soft sand on the edge of the road. Their car slipped about six feet into a ditch.
