ROSE FESTIVAL WEEK.

Oregon's greatest festival, that of the Rose, is on this week.

It should not be considered Portland's Rose Festival although held in Portland. It belongs to Oregon and all Oregon should be interested in its success and so far as possible participate in it to help make it a success.

Instead of being a three-day celebration this year practically the whole week is devoted to the festivities. The queen, Suzanne I, was crowned yesterday. Rosaria, a new pageant, written for this occasion will be produced each evening at Multnomah field.

Thursday and Friday will be great days. On the first will occur the great rose parade and on Friday will occur a new feature, the Merrykhana parade. This will be a hilarious occasion and it is said all Portland will "do it with smiles."

Gresham will be represented by a beautiful float in the floral parade.

Hence this community, along with many others outside of Portland, is vitally interested and should respond generously to help perpetuate this annual festival of the queen of flowers.

HELP THE ENDOWMENT.

There are said to be 35,000 war orphans, and many times more sick, ailing and disabled ex-service men whose lives the war has blighted. We can not do too much for them. Our debt can never be fully repaid. The American Legion has assumed the obligation of seeing that these two and other consequences of the war receive a full measure of justice. They are asking the public's assistance to the limit and are meeting with merited response.

LOST ARTS.

It is claimed by those who have devoted study to such things that the civilizations of two thousand or more years ago possessed knowledge of several arts that were later lost and have never been rediscovered.

One of these was malleable glass. It is said that by some unknown process glass was made so it could be bent or worked like metal without breaking. Doubt however has been thrown on this claim and it does seem improbable else specimens would be found. Also even in these days it is claimed that unbreakable glass can be made.

Another ancient art, which the moderns do not seem to fully understand, was the hardening of copper, giving it the hardness of steel.

The dye makers of ancient Tyre are said to have produced a shade of purple more beautiful than anything since known. All efforts to reproduce it have failed. With the fall of Tyre the secret was lost.

Even granting that these arts are lost we have gone so far beyond the ancient experts in similar and other lines that we have no reason to envy them a few of their secrets.

Perhaps our morticians do not fully understand the old methods of embalming by which the bodies of ancient kings have been preserved for four thousand years and more. But it is claimed that modern science permits the study by X-ray and other methods of the bones and organs, skin and tissues of the mummified bodies, ages old, and the determination of the diseases of which the ancient dignitaries died. That's some feat.

Moreover, modern embalming methods, it is said, can cause the dead body to harden and turn its dust into a stone image that it is doubted if even the resurrection can rehabilitate. And that's some feat, if it is true.

There may be a few lost arts but who of this day and age would want to go back to the time of the old Romans, Tyrians or Egyptians to live under their civilization and lose all that the world has gained in science, art and knowledge since their times?

Yet some people say, Oh, for the good old times! If Mr. Dobell and Adah Losh Rose could get them to repeat "Rosaria" on the fair grounds along with the big celebration July 4 to 7, their program would be quite complete.

Who says there's nothing new under the sun? Portland can show him several new things this week.

In the Merrykhana parade on Friday will be "Razzberry" section, we are told. That's where Gresham should come in.

"A Rose for Every Heart," is the title of a song and rose ballet to be sung and acted as a feature of "Rosaria." As to that most of us are many hearted, and we wish our eyes and noses included.

COUNTRY LIFE AND HEALTH.

Rural residents of Oregon are longer lived and healthier than their city cousins, according to a report of an eastern agricultural foundation which has been investigating rural conditions here recently.

Analysis of mortality statistics for Oregon brings to light some interesting facts concerning the health of both the city man and the small town resident, says the report. There are nearly twice as many deaths from appendicitis in the cities than occur in the rural districts. Tuberculosis and diphtheria are not as fatal in the outlying sections as they are in the crowded centers, and neither cancer nor diabetes are as deadly in the open spaces as they are to residents of cities. Deaths from heart disease are much more common in the cities, and bronchitis and pneumonia do not take their toll in the rural districts to the same extent as in the cities.

Death by suicide is a much more frequent occurrence in the city than in the small places, and the same is found to hold true for homicide. On the other hand, scarlet fever is found to take its heaviest toll in the more isolated regions, and influenza is a greater menace in the country than in the city.

The lower death rate of the rural sections of the state as compared to the cities is no doubt due in a large measure to the more normal, natural life that the rural resident leads as compared to the person in the large cities. This is the more remarkable since only three per cent of the country's rural residents, it is estimated, observe the fundamentals of health in the disposal of their sewage and the safeguarding of their drinking water supply. As rural health work is expanded, a big change may be looked for in the prevention of premature death and human illness as well as promotion of public health and economic savings.

Another fact, which the report does not mention, which helps to account for a longer, healthier life in the country is the greater freedom of mind of the rural population generally. The agriculturist may work hard and keep long hours but he worries less and sleeps more peacefully.

On the Q. T.

A minister of a rural parish, motoring home one day after a round of visits, overtook a girl plodding along a country road carrying a heavy basket of provisions.

Recognizing her as a servant employed by a farmer living near his parsonage, he pulled up and offered her a lift. When he came to the lane leading to the farm he stopped to let her get down and she said, "Oh, thank you sir."

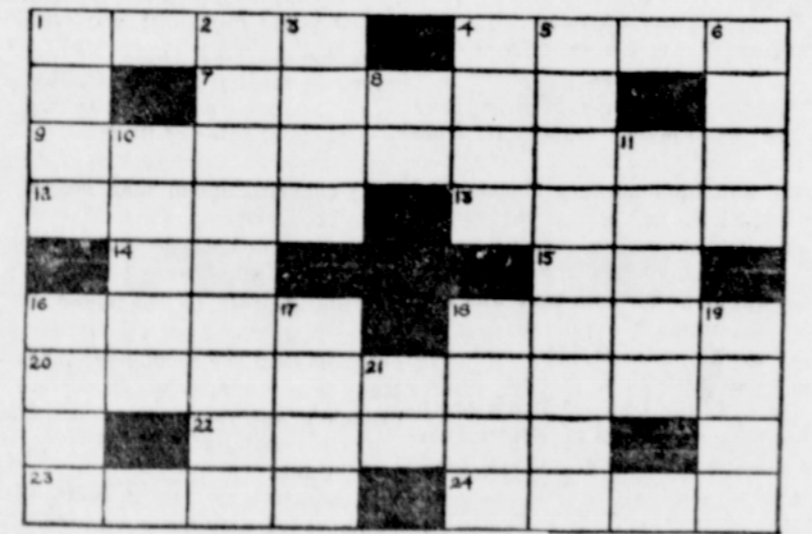

"Don't mention it," replied the minister. The girl blushed prettily, hung her head, then looked up archly, "All right," she said, "mum's the word."

Cream Prices

The Sandy Creamery is paying 47 cents at the creamery and 45 cents on the route for butterfat.—Adv.

OUR CROSS WORD PUZZLE

By Mrs. Ethel Gibbs and Claude Welch. This crossword puzzle was arranged by Mrs. Ethel Gibbs and Claude Welch, so it ought to be a good one. Every one knows that two heads are better than one. We don't believe we can see anything new about it. It is short, snappy, and very interesting, and should be completed in less than 15 minutes—that is, if you are as good at crossword puzzles as you should be after working all that we have published. Are you?
