FINANCIAL PATRIOT

In paying tribute on July 4th to the patriot fathers of the Revolution we should not omit the name of

ROBERT MORRIS.

Morris financed the Revolution. Had it not been for him it is hardly likely that we would have won our independence.

His credit was stronger than that of Continental Congress. He gave freely of his time, his wealth and influence.

One winter day he trudged through the snow from door to door—and raised $50,000 before night—for Washington's men. His part in the surrender of Cornwallis was to raise $1,400,000 for the campaign.

While soldiers of the Revolution receive most of our praise, let us not forget to give some measure of credit to this thrifty and generous financial patriot—Robert Morris.
