DEATH OF P. L. CAMPBELL.

In the death of President Prince L. Campbell of the University of Oregon not only that important institution of learning but the state at large loses an educational leader and citizen whose influence for good has touched with inspiration very many lives.

He was born in 1861 of Oregon pioneers and come of a long line of teachers and ministers.

There were fewer than 250 students enrolled when President Campbell took up his executive duties at Eugene. Today there are approximately 3,000 regular students.

"During the first years of his service to the university the institution faced many problems and solved many difficulties," says Dean John Straub, in commenting on President Campbell's early work.

"Unquestionably, the university would not be where it is today had it not been for the valiant service Dr. Campbell gave as president.

"By his tact and foresight, he overcame all obstacles which hindered the growth and progress of the university. He was a man of sterling integrity and the highest ideals. He steadfastly refused to justify the means by the end, preferring at all times to fight honestly for the progress of the university. No man in the state was more beloved by students and by citizens than Prince L. Campbell."

WHY FARMERS NEED THE GRANGE.

The grange is undoubtedly one of our best organizations for the benefit of the agriculturist and improvement of farm conditions. Its principles and teachings are the highest possible from every standpoint.

Many local granges are backward, just like communities, but the grange has all the making of a powerful force in the community and throughout the whole country and it should measure up to its opportunity.

We would rather see the farmer's problems worked out by the grange as an organization than by any other we know of.

One of the grange principles is organization. This is and always has been one of the most powerful factors in human progress. Through thorough organization alone can stability and profitable production and marketing come to the more than six million farmers of this country.

The grange is back of this movement. It should be the leader and show the way to its accomplishment. All who are interested should get back of the grange.

Vancouver, Wash., is celebrating the centenary of its birth with appropriate exercises including a pageant, "The Coming of the White Man." Behold what a century has wrought!

Klan Parade at Washington

Probably one of the most picturesque parades ever to pass down historic Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington was that of the 60,000 Klansmen, August 8. Klansmen and families came from virtually every state in the nation. In the center, (foreground) is Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans.
