Nightfall.
The sun sank like a red tomato behind a sky the color of mud. One by one, then faster and faster (Like bills on the first of the month) The stars appeared.
The moon, a cooky someone had bitten, became visible;
The stars flickered and twinkled, like Ford lights when the ignition is bad;
The twittering of the birds was hushed, as if some celestial proctor had entered an exam. room.

Darkness fell—
Night settled on the landscape with the deliberation of a man falling from a third story window in slow motion pictures.

When You Get to Florida

HAINES CITY GETS YOU

IT GETS you, first because of its natural attractions. Its elevation of 221 feet above sea level, and the six lakes within the city's limits mirror the blue of a frequently cloudless sky.

Again, Haines City gets you because of its business possibilities. "This town has a thrill", said a stranger who came to look it over. That's it exactly. A Thrill! Everybody senses it. It's a something in the air. You can't help but feel it. Things are on the move. Improvements everywhere. Wide streets. New Stores being built. Enlargements of older premises. Churches going up. A Big Hotel taking shape. A new Grammar School. A new Theatre. New Everything. Yes, there's a business thrill about the place.

And it's infectious, too. Come to Haines City and it will get you. There's nothing unpleasant about it. In fact, it's just what most people are seeking, namely, a good place to locate where there's a chance for a profitable investment; a place where one can grow with the growth of a city that knows what it wants, and which is now reaching out to its destiny.
