He was taken to a Portland hospital for treatment.

Pneumonia Season.

Winter and spring are the pneumonia seasons. Pneumonia took six hundred and ten lives in Oregon during 1925 and seriously inconvenienced over 5000 of its citizens. The annual death rate of this disease is about 75 per 100,000 in this state, while the death rate for the United States is over 100. The number of deaths in Oregon fell from 648 in 1924 to 610 in 1925. Pneumonia is one of the most prevalent and fatal of all acute diseases. As a cause of death it rivals, and in this state, exceeds tuberculosis.

Pneumonia is a communicable disease which should be classified with the infectious fevers. It is an inflammatory consolidation of the lungs in which the air vesicles throw out a fibrous exudate which speedily becomes solid and obliterates the air vesicles of a portion of the lungs. The disease generally begins with a well marked chill, high fever, cough, pain and difficult breathing. It may follow the usual course and at the end of seven or eight days the fever will stop suddenly and the patient make a rapid recovery.

Pneumonia is a preventable disease and means should be taken for its prevention. The prevention of pneumonia is rapidly becoming more definite through a better understanding of the cause of the infection and the factors which contribute to its spread. Measures that will bring about a reduction of the number of cases of colds, gripe and influenza will lessen the number of cases of pneumonia. Cold, wetting and chilling are generally regarded as predisposing causes. But the chilling effects of cold moist air are not as conducive to a high death rate as a relatively low humidity. Pneumonia is spread chiefly by close personal contact with persons having pneumonia or by carriers of this disease. Carriers may infect themselves by inspiration. Man is the source of infection and each case of pneumonia spreads the virulent infection. All cases of pneumonia should be isolated and the discharges from the nose and throat should be burned or disinfected.

infection. Persons who sleep, work and play together, wash from the same bowl and eat with the same tableware, have every opportunity of spreading the infection. This accounts for the fact that we usually have epidemics in camps, schools, prisons, institutions, and industrial establishments. It is important to know that the infection is spread from man to man through the secretions of mouth and nose. Prevent pneumonia by keeping the mouth and teeth clean; by keeping objects and hands out of the mouth; and by avoiding infection and exposure.

WESTERN BORN

I'm western born
And western bred
The West's in my heart.
The West's in my head.
I'm western-minded, western made,
Western visioned and unafraid,
Western geared and western trained,
Western souled and western brained,
I want to live my life each day
With western friends in a western way.
And when I die
I want to lie
In western ground
'Neath the western sky.
