Some of the finest samples of strawberries which have graced the Outlook desk this season were brought in Friday afternoon by A. W. Anderson, who resides six miles east of Sandy in the Dover neighborhood. Mr. Anderson has about six acres into strawberries, all of the New Oregon variety, and he considers that is to be a staple variety in that part of the country, as more and more acreage is being set out to this particular kind of fruit. The berries were wonderful in size and rich in flavor, considering the abundance of rain and lack of warm sun during the past few days. Mr. Anderson thinks they are not yet at their best.

Raymond Humason of Portland was the guest at dinner one evening last week of his mother, Mrs. C. Humason.
