SUDDEN DEATH TAKES LYNCH SCHOOL TEACHER

The friends of Miss Gladys Pennington were inexpressibly shocked Monday morning to receive word of her sudden death which occurred Sunday morning at Corvallis. Word of her death was received by telephone from W. D. Kinder by S. B. Hall, county agricultural agent. She was one of the party to leave Gresham a week ago as a chaperone with the group of club boys and girls of the county which went to Corvallis for the two weeks session of the annual summer school.

Miss Pennington was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Pennington, of 361 East 34th street. She had very successfully concluded her first year as primary teacher at the Lynch school and had been re-elected for another year. When news of her death was announced at the Sunday school session of Lynch last Sunday morning it could hardly be accredited, as she left only a week ago in the best of health and spirits and full of enthusiasm for the club work of the children, in which she was deeply interested. Her death is said to be due to complications arising from pneumonia. She had undergone an operation for appendicitis about six weeks before the close of her school, but apparently she had recovered from the effects of this.

Funeral services were held this afternoon at the residential funeral home of Downing & Benefiel in Portland.

After a special meeting to take place the last of this month, the club will hold no more meetings until the first Thursday in September, at which time it is hoped to occupy the new clubhouse. Although meetings will be adjourned for a short time during the summer, the club will be actively busy in the erection of its new building.

Gall-Stone Disease.

You have frequently noticed crystals formed in the bottom of a syrup pitcher, when the article stands on the pantry shelf, unused for some time. Crystals of sugar form quickly when the syrup is not agitated. So crystals in bile—the liver secretion, if by inactive habits, or over-feeding, the body is sluggish and the bile becomes stagnant—does not flow readily—is thick and heavy. The concretions form in the gall-bladder, and are known as gall-stones.

Many people have gall-stones and don't know it. I removed over 70 good-sized gall-stones once, in an autopsy; the patient in life had never suspected such, and died of a different disease. Should a stone "engage" however, and start to escape from the gall-bladder, there is no process more painful.

All people who have jaundice should have a gall-stone examination. In modern surgery their removal is not serious so far as life is concerned. Jaundice in aged patients is too often a symptom of cancer to be regarded lightly. Such a symptom demands thorough investigation at the first indication of the yellow coloration.

Latent gall-stone is seldom accompanied by fever. Acute jaundice in young patients, with fever, especially in malarial districts, are generally due to infected gall-bladder, and are readily curable. The treatment of such conditions is too technical to be placed in short articles like this.

Are you driving a second choice CAR?

Leadership today belongs to Buick because so many people make it their first choice among all motor cars.

They have discovered that other cars, priced the same as Buick, are not even close to Buick in value.

Volume production enables Buick to give you a lot better car for a very moderate price.

Do not be misled into driving a second-choice car. Compare the new car offered you to Buick, before you let go of your money!

The best simple preventive of gall-stone is exercise. The crystals cannot form if the gall-bladder empties normally. The man or woman with an ugly liver needs the outdoors and vegetable diet. Indoors and sedentary habits are most potent shorteners of life.

CAMP FIRE PERMITS WILL BE REQUIRED

Campfire permits will be required again on the national forests of Oregon and Washington this summer, according to announcement recently issued by district forester C. M. Granger. Forest supervisors of the 14 national forests in Oregon and eight national forests in Washington have been authorized to initiate the permit requirement whenever they deem conditions such as to warrant it. Permits will not be required at forest camps having a caretaker in charge on the grounds. The Mount Hood national forest has been requiring the permits since May 15. Several other forests started the system June 1. The forest service requests that campers planning trips into the national forests get in touch with the local supervisor or ranger regarding campfire, closed areas, and other points.

Failure to comply with the campfire permit requirement is a violation of the trespass regulations of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"We do not wish our forest visitors to feel that this is an undue restriction of their pleasure," said Mr. Granger. "Campfire permits are necessary to help us keep track of the fire hazard; but campfire permits will not prevent forest fires. Only extreme care and watchfulness on the part of every camper will do that."

It is pointed out that these permits apply only to national forest lands. The state of Washington requires a permit for campfires anywhere within the state. Oregon does not have this provision. In either state, however, any person is criminally liable if he lets his fire get away and start a forest fire.
