

New O.A.C. Women's Building Ready for Returning Students

Miss Ruth B. Glassow and new women's plant over which she will preside.

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis.—After many years' work in the old frame women's gymnasium, built first as an armory for a student body of 500, the 1100 women students here will enter the new $300,000 women's building at the beginning of the new term Monday, January 3.

The department of physical education for women has moved into the new building. Under the direction of Miss Ruth B. Glassow, new head of the department, members of the staff prepared equipment and other details in readiness to start all work in the new quarters without delay.

The new structure is located to the north of old Cauthorn hall, where it forms the last unit in the cordon of buildings surrounding the west quadrangle. It is close to all the women's halls and to the home economics and commerce buildings where most of the women's courses are given.

Being three stories high in the center with two story wings, the new building provides ample space to care for the expected increase in women students for many years to come. On the ground floor are locker and shower rooms and the big tiled swimming pool. Offices, class rooms, main gymnasium and games room, interpretive dancing room and a beautiful lobby are on the main floor. Additional office space, corrective, rest and social rooms are on the third floor. Modern in every respect though not extravagant, the building is said to be the best for its purpose on any American campus.

New Justice Offers Inducements to Cupid

On account of the extraordinary honor which has been conferred on Gresham's new justice of the peace, O. A. Eastman, in the new role of grandfather, which title he is bearing with becoming dignity, upon assuming the duties of his office on the coming Monday, January 3, he is making the announcement that the first six couples applying to him for the performance of the marriage ceremony may receive the tying of the matrimonial knot free of charge. So here's advice to come early and avoid the rush.

The formalities attending the qualification of the two county officials resident in Gresham, O. A. Eastman as justice of the peace, and M. M. Squire as constable, were attended to earlier in the week in the office of the county clerk in Portland and nothing now remains but to begin the routine of whatever business may develop.

Upon the death of the former justice, John Brown, Mayor Charles Cleveland was appointed by the county commissioners to complete the unexpired term of Mr. Brown. Mr. Eastman was elected to the office at the general election held in November. His jurisdiction extends over all the county outside of the city of Portland, but does not include any cases arising under city ordinances within the Gresham city limits. All violations of city laws are tried before Recorder C. G. Schneider.

Mr. Eastman has resided in Gresham for the past 15 years and is considered well qualified by legal training for the duties of his new office. He is elected for a term of six years and the office of justice carries with it a substantial salary. His headquarters will be maintained in the city hall. He says it is his intention to administer justice in an impartial manner and consider carefully the merits of every question which may arise for his decision.

M. M. Squire, who was elected county constable at the November election, is eminently fitted for this responsibility as he has been a deputy sheriff for a number of years past and is conversant with the matters which will be likely to occupy his attention in the incumbency as constable. He succeeded himself at the recent election.

Lights Increase Egg Production.

There has been considerable argument for and against artificial lighting of poultry houses, some claiming that while lighting may increase egg production, the vitality of the birds are decreased thereby. The agricultural experiment station of New Jersey, which has made many experiments both with and without artificial lighting, states that it has been conclusively proven that increased egg production and better health are the results of artificial lighting of laying flocks. A three-year study of 280 flocks, with a population of 804,139 birds was made and the tests showed that an average of 67.1 eggs were obtained from pullets where no lights were used and 75.3 with lights. The tests covered a period of five months yearly, from November to April.

Music First Choice of Radio Listeners

Oregon Fans Like Violin, Baritone Solo, but Shy at Soprano

Musical entertainment is the first choice of the Oregon radio audience when it begins to turn the dials of its collective receivers preparatory to a pleasant evening at home. Informational lectures follow close in popularity, with readings and plays pulling up a poor third. These preferences were expressed by set owners in a survey made by the extension service of the Oregon Agricultural college to indicate material to go into programs broadcast from KOAC, college radio station.

The solo instrument group rated above vocalists, 406 to 343, this survey found. The violin proved the most popular instrument, while baritone solo led the field of vocalists. Sopranos seemed to be in disfavor, receiving only 34 out of 343 votes. Male quartets ranked high.

The good old melodies that every one knows received 128 votes to 79 for present day popular airs. Classical music ranked third with 59 voting for it.

Travel talks were most popular in the general lecture field, with Oregon history, Oregon scenery, and international relations following in order. Business law ranked sixth. All of these subjects will be heard from KOAC within the present college year. Business law has been listed as a home study course to begin Wednesday evening, January 5. A series of chatty anecdotes about early Oregon history will be related by Dr. J. B. Horner, beginning Friday, January 7.

In agriculture, market news led the field of service and informational material. Insect pests, plant diseases, and poultry keeping figured prominently. These features will form the backbone of Monday night broadcasts from KOAC beginning January 3.

Home study courses on poultry breeding, poultry feeding, and feeding and care of hogs have been arranged. Any resident of Oregon may enroll without charge, and will be supplied bulletins and other material to supplement the radio lectures.
