IMPORTANT ELECTION TODAY.

It shouldn't be necessary to urge voters of Multnomah county to cast their ballots today for one of the two candidates for congressman but becomes necessary because of the general apathy manifest. On the broad principles of political welfare, the Outlook maintains it is more important that voters go to the polls and express their preference than the mere question of whom they vote for.

In these strenuous times one must not only be unusually active but must be possessed of that aliveness which is necessary in the development of initiative powers that are so valuable in the fight for success.—Bernarr Macfadden.

The tariff troubles between the United States and France have again served to emphasize the different principles on which national and international policies are based in the United States and Europe. In our own country tariffs are assessed against all nations alike. They are assessed on the theory that in order to assure the American wage scale and the American standard of living, goods coming from Europe must be taxed to a point which will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, which is after all the difference in the wage scale and the standards of living.

In Europe the tariff question is approached differently as the recent action of France shows. There tariffs are made not on a broad general basis but for bargaining purposes, in an effort to get certain commercial or political advantages from this or that nation. Hence one nation may be discriminated against and the other favored in the matter of tariffs. All nations are not treated alike. It is the old European scheme of bargaining and intriguing for national advantage, playing one nation against another.

POLITICS AND GEOGRAPHY.

A question that is just now agitating the minds of party leaders is the relation between politics and geography. What influence will geographical location of a candidate have on his success in an election?

The country is one but there are strong influences centering in the various geographical sections. The old solid south does not exist but there is still a north and a south, an east and a west. Naturally any one of these sections is inclined most strongly to support its native son. Each section has interests it is zealous to promote and it takes a very broad-minded man to not show partiality toward the section with which he is most familiar.

For instance Senator Borah is a tower of political strength, broad, safe and sound and would undoubtedly be in line for consideration as a nominee for the country's highest office but he is from the north-west and would not carry the east like an easterner.

The center of population is still only about a thousand miles from the Atlantic and two thousand miles from the Pacific.

Since its beginning the republican party has made eighteen presidential nominations. Thirteen nominees were taken from the Mississippi valley, one from the Pacific coast, and four from the east. Of the eastern four, two were from New York, and two from New England. Roosevelt from New York and Coolidge from Massachusetts were successful; Blaine and Hughes, the other eastern men, were defeated. Of the thirteen from the Mississippi valley, only two were defeated: Harrison and Taft. Both however, had previously won their first entries.

The democrats in the last eighteen races, have gone to the Mississippi valley only four times. They nominated Bryan three times, and Cox once. Both were defeated. Thus while the Mississippi valley has spelled success for the republicans, it has meant defeat for the democrats. But the democrats succeeded five times in eastern territory, and elected Buchanan of Pennsylvania, Cleveland from New York twice and Wilson from New Jersey twice.

It has been 67 years since the democrats have gone south of the Mason and Dixon line for a candidate.

WHAT DOES JUDGE LINDSEY MEAN?

Next Saturday evening, October 22, at the Portland public auditorium Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, will debate the question of "companionate" marriage, taking the affirmative, favoring the suggestion which likely originated with him. The discussion is open to the public, young and old, with a charge, of course.

There has been much objection to this open presentation of a subject rather delicate and liable to be misleading. Probably few persons know what Judge Lindsey, ex-judge of the juvenile court at Denver, means by his suggestion and infer he means a sort of free-love affair.

The November issue of Sunset throws some light on the subject. It says:

"A little while ago Judge Lindsey, father of juvenile courts, started the Christian world with the suggestion that a system of 'companionate marriages' might reduce promiscuous immoral relations among modern young men and women and educate them for permanent matrimony. In common with the rest of the world, we assumed that Judge Lindsey meant a free and informal union to be dissolved as informally as it started. We were mistaken, though. When Judge Lindsey left Denver and came to the Coast, he explained that his idea of a 'companionate marriage' was a formal union undertaken with bell, book and candle, with ring, license and liturgy, but apparently with the understanding that it could be dissolved at any time by mutual consent. It was his hope that informal, inexpensive divorce without its present stigma would encourage earlier marriages among the youngsters with large demands and no incomes, thereby inducing them to stay put, to quit shifting their evanescent attachments from one person to the other.

"Russia has made it extremely easy to get in and out of the state of matrimony, but the Russian experiment, so far as we can learn, has not been a success. Children will make their appearance, you know, and their arrival means that either one or both parents will have to buckle down, keep their noses close to the grindstone and sacrifice their complete freedom of action for the sake of the next generation.

"All mating, be it orthodox, companionate or wholly without benefit of clergy, means the assumption of responsibility, self-control, self-denial. In the very nature of the process no means can be devised to dodge this responsibility, to have one's cake and eat it, too, without sacrificing the next generation. And it's doubtful whether the encouragement of irresponsibility is really of benefit to the race."

FATAL AIR PRIZES.

It's just about as far from New York to San Francisco as from New York to London; it's farther from New York to Spokane than it is from Harbor Grace, N. F., to Ireland. Over both inland routes the air does not differ materially in quantity or quality from the ocean air and the same stars are to be seen over both routes. Why, then, should a flight across water by a land plane advance the cause of aviation farther than a flight by the same kind of a plane over land? Let's pull our heads out of the sand and face the fact that the promoters of nearly all trans-oceanic flights put up the prize money for the sake of the publicity they and their enterprises would receive as a result of the hazardous undertaking. On account of the huge number of fatalities the publicity has had the reverse English, hence new prizes will be exceedingly scarce for some time to come. Therefore a lull in the futile sacrifice of lives and equipment is in prospect. Thank God.—Sunset Magazine.
