A CONTRAST.

In Col. Chas. A. Lindbergh we have one of the highest types of citizenship—a young man of clean habits and worthy achievements, whom the whole world welcomes and honors.

In William Edward Hickman, confessed kidnaper of a child and cruel murderer, we have a young man of diabolical character who has forfeited his right to liberty and life and is spurned by all men.

Think of the contrast! There was only six years difference in their ages. Each was possessed of a sound body and a sane mind.

One takes the upward course of cleanness, honesty, self-respect and service. The other yields to temptation, commits a minor crime, finds the way easy, considers himself a sly fox, hastens to the limit of crime and doom.

It is possible Lindbergh had more home help and better parental influence than Hickman. But each had ability to choose, to go straight or go crooked. The position of each today is the result of that choice, one reaching a high pinnacle of usefulness at 25, the other facing the gallows at 19.

The youth of today should learn the lesson.

CERTAIN ADS.

One evidence that the Outlook isn't published just for money may be seen in the fact that certain ads are steadfastly refused. The Outlook pages contain no glaring suggestions that it is "class" or proper for girls to smoke cigarettes or any encouragement for boys to form the habit. We believe a newspaper should record the news, reflect public opinion, uphold good citizenship and encourage the better things in personal and community life. The Outlook is not alone in this attitude among the newspapers of the state.

A year isn't long when you look back upon it.

The new calendars will brighten the places of the old.

It will now be up to the ladies to be more aggressive—if possible.

"Don't undo others as you have been undone by them," is suggested as a sort of supplement to the Golden Rule.

Fourteen deaths were reported from acute alcoholism over Christmas in New York City. Will New Year's equal the record?

Some will want to throw discretion to the winds and welcome the New Year by disregard of the prohibition law. Better not.

The failure of another attempt to fly across the Atlantic, with the loss of the four occupants of the plane, The Dawn, is recorded with regret. And this time again it was the ambition of a woman to urge on and with her companions make the attempt.

The auto, it is said by a research society, has given the cigarette a big boost. Last year about 88 billion cigarettes were manufactured in this country as against 14 billion in 1915. So far as harm to the smoker is concerned, the cigarette comes first, the cigar next and the pipe third.

The election of A. C. Ruby to the presidency of the Pacific International Livestock exposition is viewed by his friends and friends of the exposition as a happy combination. The Oregonian, referring to the event, says of Mr. Ruby that he is first of all a stockman, knows and comprehends the domestic animals that constitute the very backbone of husbandry, and he is thorough and enthusiastic.

The United States senate has refused to seat Vane of Pennsylvania and Smith of Illinois on the ground of excessive and corrupt use of funds in securing their election. Each practically bought his election. It seems, however, that neither state places any limit on the amount its senatorial candidate can spend for election purposes, so that each was regularly elected. There is difference of opinion among authorities whether the senate can rightfully deny them their seats if their respective states send them as their accredited senators. There is a question as to whether the senate could justly refuse to seat them or should have seated them first and then brought charges of corruption against them and if proved unseated them.

MOTHER AND HER LOVE.

Dedicated to my Mother, Mrs. J. A. Stephens, who was called home on Thanksgiving day.

Looking backward on the pathway That my feet have traveled o'er I behold a mellow light ray That has cheered me more and more.

Through the years the light kept shining With a clear and steady glow Giving gloom a silver lining Surging like the ocean's flow.

The light that shone was Mother's love But alas her soul has fled Yet from the glory world above Hers with love divine is shed.

Oh, mothers, fairest of the earth That mould and fashion the pace Of human endeavor from birth, On thy love depends the race.

—JOSEPH F. STEPHENS.
