

Flowers for the Day

The white carnation still remains the generally accepted symbol of Mother's day, though usage has introduced the wearing of the red carnation in tribute of living mothers.

In 1914 congress passed a bill designating the second Sunday in May as "Mother's day" and calling upon the President to issue a proclamation requesting government officials to display the American flag on all government buildings each Mother's day.

OFFICE OF SHERIFF IS IMPORTANT ONE

There are several county officials who are sitting pretty tight and not fearing but that they will be nominated and re-elected. There are only two that have no opposition on the republican ticket. They are Welch, county assessor, and Bonser, county surveyor.

Earl Smith, county coroner, has an opponent in John G. Schroeder. W. C. Alderson has an opponent for county school superintendent. His name is Robert M. Hamill.

John M. Lewis has been county treasurer for a long time and usually has had no opposition. His present slogan means all it says: "Pledged to all the people, the faithful discharge of a public trust." His opponent simply says, "A new broom." But the county treasurer's office doesn't seem to need a new broom.

Thomas M. Hurlburt, county sheriff, has two rather strong opponents. One, Roy Kendall, it is the general opinion, will run the present sheriff a close race. The sheriff's office is a coveted office and in the hands of some can be used for selfish purposes and hurtful to public interests.

It is generally conceded that during the 12 years he has held this office he has always played fair and square. He has always stood against graft and dishonesty, and has administered his office with the greatest efficiency. All the books of the office have recently been audited by one of the most substantial firms of auditors in the state and they found everything in every department in first-class shape, with never a penny lost to the county. They commended the office on its fine showing.

Sheriff Hurlburt has an asset that cannot be bought with money—he has character. He is at the top notch of efficiency. He is a man that cannot be bribed. He is generous. He is conscientious. He is fearless. He has capable deputies. He has collected $145,000,000 during his tenure in office without loss of a cent to the county. It is no wonder other men would like his job.

It is said that Homer D. Angell was a prominent football athlete in his college days though handicapped by the loss of an arm. But that won't handicap him as a legislator for which position he is a candidate on the republican ballot for this county. He has been an attorney in Portland for about 25 years.

PROTECT HIGHWAYS ADVISES CASSELL

James H. Cassell.

Jas. H. Cassell is editor of Automotive News and one of the organizers of the Oregon Good Roads association. He is campaigning against the proposed $3 license fee because it threatens the destruction of our highway system. At the same time he is vigorously advocating a reduction in automobile license fee with a small increase in gas tax to provide funds necessary to carry on the Oregon highway program.

"Make the highways of Oregon available to all Oregon motorists the year round," declares Cassell. "A lower license fee, perhaps payable in two installments, will permit every motorist to take out license plates the first of January, resulting in increased gas tax revenue."

Cassell, editor, trade association manager, ex-service man, and sportsman, is one of the candidates for the legislature from Multnomah county.

W. C. T. U. COLUMN

(By Hattie M. Wolfe)

To those who have paid little attention to politics, or the science of government it may be surprising to note the many things a cabinet member can do for prohibition, likewise what he may leave undone.

The president appoints his cabinet. They are often his personal friends and are supposed to be like-minded and congenial to him, privately and politically.

The secretary of state has within his power the making of treaties, and some of the most important factors in the breaking up of rum on the Atlantic coast were the understandings arrived at between England and the United States in regard to the liquor traffic.

The secretary of the treasury in consultation with the president, appoints the heads of the prohibition bureau, the customs and the coast guard.

The attorney general has no less a part to play in the enforcement of prohibition than has the secretary of the treasury. In consultation with the president he appoints the assistant attorney general, who is in charge of prohibition cases, and hundreds of United States district attorneys, marshals and secret service men, who bring to the bar of justice and prosecute violators of the federal prohibition law.

The secretary of labor has charge of matters pertaining to immigration. In his hands lies the administration of the quota laws, and the deportation of undesirable or criminal aliens.

The secretaries of war and navy have under their direct care a large family of young men, soldiers and sailors, and it is to them we look for the moral and physical welfare of the boys in their charge.

The secretary of the interior has supervision of public education and public welfare. The teaching of scientific temperance in the public schools may be very properly called a public welfare measure, and the commission of public education can do much to further this and other great educational measures.

The postmaster general and his assistants have it in their power to punish improper use of the mails as to advertising of contraband articles.

The secretaries of agriculture and commerce have their bits to do or not to do, according to their personal ideas.

A wet president means a wet cabinet, and this means innumerable appointees in sympathy with that regime, likewise a dry president.

An oath to observe a law in which one has no sympathy means very little.

Young Sears plead guilty Saturday in justice court to the charge of assault and battery, following an altercation over a line fence. Sears claimed that Mr. Carey was not closing the gates properly, thereby letting his cattle out onto the railway tracks and the adjacent highway. As the gates are the property of the Portland Electric Power company, Carey contended that he was not under any obligation to close them. In the dispute which took place Carey was stung by a blow from the flat of young Sears.

Deputy Sheriff M. M. Squire arrested Sears and brought him into justice court where the hearing took place before Judge O. A. Eastman. The case has been continued until May 12.

WRITER URGES VOTERS NOMINATE J. N. BARDE

To the Editor of the Outlook:— Allow me space in your columns to tell your readers why I am interested in and urge the election of J. N. Barde to membership in the 1928 legislature.

The experience of four years at the head of the financial management of the Children's Farm Home gave me an insight into its problems that no other member of its board can have. I realize that before we can accomplish our purpose to give a real home to the normal dependent children of the state we must have larger and more enthusiastic support from the people at large and intelligent cooperation from the legislative body. To secure this last and to meet immediate problems, it is tremendously important that we have a real representative business man in the 1928 legislature who will make its interests chief in his efforts there. Mr. Barde has pledged me that he will do this and I believe that I can personally guarantee that he will keep that pledge.

Multnomah county, and, on account of the location of our county fair, the Gresham district in particular, needs a keen business man there who can be trusted to guard its business interests. Surely Gresham has not forgotten its debt to Mr. Barde in the thousands of full page advertising he secured for them in the farm home ticket sale which spelled an entirely new era for the county fair.

The government of the state is by long odds the biggest corporate business interest in our state, and yet by our ballots we send men to the legislature to fix the business policy of the state whose business judgment we would not trust in our own small business interests. Why not elect a man who has abundantly proven his ability to carry great business interests, rather than those whose sole fitness is a somewhat cursory knowledge of law books and not astonishingly successful in a legal career.

Aside from this I have Mr. Barde's solemn pledge that he will use his position if elected to safeguard our prohibition law and in such measures as will guarantee its more rigid enforcement.

I earnestly believe, because of a somewhat intimate acquaintance, that Mr. Barde can be safely trusted with the moral, business and humanitarian interest of our state and I can not say the same of more than a half dozen of the other two score candidates.

FREE BABY CLINICS TO AID MOTHERS

Free baby clinics are being held under the direction of the Multnomah County Public Health association in various parts of the county for the benefit of the mothers and the welfare of the children. Children under school age are eligible for the free examinations which are being given by experienced doctors and nurses.

Tuesday, May 22, has been chosen for the clinic in Gresham, which will be held in the basement of the Methodist church, beginning at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. A Portland doctor will conduct the clinic, and will be assisted by Miss Maud Hicks, county public health nurse, Miss Mary Nadeau and Miss Gwendolyn Johnson, registered nurses. The local physicians have been invited to assist.

Similar clinics will be held at Rockwood at 1:30 o'clock on Monday, May 21, and at Lynch school on Thursday, May 17. Dr. Helen Dennis will conduct the clinic at Rockwood and Dr. Chas. C. Newcastle the one at Lynch.

YOUNG MAN ARRESTED ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Again the disputed line fence has been made the subject of heated controversy. Sentence has been suspended in the case of P. E. Carey, complaining witness for the state, vs. Fred Sears, 21-year-old son of R. C. Sears, who lives on the Dammer place in the southeast part of Gresham.

Young Sears plead guilty Saturday in justice court to the charge of assault and battery, following an altercation over a line fence. Sears claimed that Mr. Carey was not closing the gates properly, thereby letting his cattle out onto the railway tracks and the adjacent highway. As the gates are the property of the Portland Electric Power company, Carey contended that he was not under any obligation to close them. In the dispute which took place Carey was stung by a blow from the flat of young Sears.

Deputy Sheriff M. M. Squire arrested Sears and brought him into justice court where the hearing took place before Judge O. A. Eastman. The case has been continued until May 12.

CARVER ASSURED ROAD FRANCHISE

The state public service commission has held a hearing in the controversy between the Clackamas county court and Stephen Carver in the matter of his franchise for the Portland Southern railroad, and has decided that Carver is entitled to crossings on the highway between the towns of Carver and Clackamas, provided his trains do not run across the road faster than five miles an hour. The commission held further that the county should clear away brush to give a better view at these crossings.

This case came prominently before the public when the county court revoked the right of Carver to cross the highway on crossings that were constructed when his road was first built. It was this decision that gave promise of the steam franchise which Carver is seeking for his road.

This is expected to clear the way for the granting of the franchise and the completion of the Carver line, which will tap great timber holdings around Viola and in the foothills of the Cascades near that place. It is estimated that more than five billion feet of timber will be reached by this line, with a short extension. From the county's standpoint this is important, as otherwise this timber or the sawed lumber will be hauled over the county roads in trucks.

Consistency of Nature Nature is always consistent, though she fails to contravene her own laws. She keeps her laws and seems to expect an animal to find its place and living in the earth, and at the same time she arms and equips another animal to destroy it. Space exists to divide creatures, but by clothing the sides of a bird with a few feathers she gives him a petty omnipotence. The direction is forever onward, but the artist still goes back for materials and begins again with the first elements on the most advanced stage; otherwise all goes to ruin. If we look at her work we seem to catch a glance of a system of transition. —Emerson.

And There You Have It "I hear your son has taken up a profession, Mr. O'Casey," remarked the visitor to the house. "He has indeed," rejoined the host. "He's phwat they call a 'cross-examiner'." "This was too much for the stranger. "And phwat's a 'cross-examiner'?" he asked. "For a minute or two O'Casey was at a loss, but eventually he pulled himself together. "Sure, it's a fellow who asks you questions, an' you answer the questions, an' then he questions the answers," he returned easily.

Origin of "Candidate" Here is one aspect of the origin of the word "candidate," as applied to a person seeking office. During a political canvass in ancient Rome it was customary for persons seeking the higher elective offices to appear in the Forum, Campus Martius and other public places dressed in white togas, the white of the natural wool being brightened with chalk. The Latin word for white is "candidus," and an office seeker so clad was called "candidatus," whence our word "candidate." The white toga was intended to signify the candidate's purity of purpose in soliciting the suffrage of the people.
