SMITH AND PROHIBITION.

Two things regarding Al Smith as democratic candidate for president are perfectly clear, he isn't in favor of prohibition as the amendment and laws, state and federal, now stand, and he is in favor of a modification that will mean practical nullification of prohibition.

In the light of Smith's recent utterances in favor of local option the democratic plank declaring for enforcement in meaningless.

NEW SHORTHAND TO BE VERSATILE

Two Systems in One—Alphabetic to Visualize Geometric and Greatly Aid Student in Acquiring Art.

Exact Representation of Shorthand Outlines to Be Shown in Types Which Is a New Achievement.

Slowly but surely a new shorthand system is being prepared for publication and arranged in easy lessons for the teacher and student. Based on the Pitmanic consonant alphabet with all the Pitmanic shortening principles it will introduce an entirely new connective vowel method, adding greatly to ease of learning, pleasure of writing and facility to read one's notes.

Along with the geometric shorthand characters a method has been devised to use regular print type to graphically represent the shorthand outlines. This becomes an alphabetic shorthand, which can also be written on the typewriter. Thus the student is taught a valuable method of abbreviated longhand which greatly simplifies the learning of a real shorthand, capable of reporting speed, which is the ultimate goal.

The new system will have an appropriate name and will be published under the authorship of H. L. St. Clair with W. W. Williams co-editor. Mr. Williams, a shorthand teacher of experience and handwriting expert, is preparing the lessons.

Questions Answered.

To the uninitiated the above announcement may lead to some questions which we will anticipate and answer as follows:

What is shorthand? Shorthand is a system of brief signs substituted for the longhand signs. These signs are the briefest and fastest that can be devised. It is essential that they be written with great speed. They must be written with one movement in order to have the requisite speed. They are short, straight lines, curves, circles and hooks. The character / is a good illustration. This is the fastest sign known as more of them can be made in a minute than any other sign. In the St. Clair system it is the letter f. A skillful writer can write 400 of these a minute while he would have difficulty in writing 50 f's.

What is the geometric system of shorthand? In the geometric system the curves used for the alphabet are arcs of the circumference of the circle and the straight lines are the radii. If the reader will take a watch and move a pencil from the figure 11 to 1, along the curve of the dial of the watch, the pencil point will describe the shorthand m; from 7 to 5, the curve is n; from 10 to 12, the curve is l; from 6 to 4 it is r. These curves are used for the alphabet as indicated and only part of the total number used. Now place your pencil on 12 and move downward to center. The letter is t; shade t and it is d. From 1 to center is f; shade it and it stands for v. With a little practice the reader will discover that they are easy to make, easy to learn and very fast to write. So the expert geometric system rolls off from the pencil easily and rapidly as it is based upon scientific principles.

What is scientific condensation of the language? In shorthand the signs are used as a suggestion of the word. In longhand we have a similar use. Mr. stands for Mister; math, to a high school student, is mathematics; gym is gymnasium. In shorthand it is carried out more completely and scientifically. The most important element in the word is seized upon and it is used for the whole word. The word "important," which was used in the preceding sentence, is written with the letter m which, as stated above, is written by passing the pencil from 11 to 1 in a curve, which in actual writing of shorthand is about one-fourth of an inch long. Can you beat it for brevity and speed? Nine letters in word important and written with a curve too short to describe the eyebrows of a tiny mouse.

What is the alphabetic system? In the expert system it is the same boiled down part of the word written with the longhand letters. The word above, "important," you have already learned how to write. In the alphabetic system, which can be written with pencil or on the typewriter, you write the letter "m".

This is getting interesting. Do you want a lesson? Well here goes. It is going to be in the alphabetic, typing system based upon the scientific condensation of the language. It is same condensation used in court and in all fast work in which the geometric system is used. iv stands for I have, il stands for I will, g stands for go, r stands for are, u stands for you, t stands for to, th for the, str for store, om for home, ows for house. Read the following: il g t th ows; ilg om; ul g t th str; il g t th gym.

The geometric system is made shorter by using hooks and circles and ticks to modify the stroke to which they are attached. Thus p stroke with a small final hook is pen. The Roman letters on the linotype may be used to give explicit and definite suggestion to the student of how to write the geometric system . The geometric system is thus visualized in known signs which are then written with the straight lines and curves of the geometric system.

A person who wishes a brief system of writing which can be learned quicker than conventional shorthand can take the alphabetic system with the assurance that it is the best condensation of the language ever devised. Also he has the added advantage that he can transfer to the geometric system at any time without taking up another system of condensation. The alphabetic system is an aid to learning the geometric system. The alphabetic visualizes the geometric and the student makes greater progress in mastering the same. Two systems in one and either can be taken without the other. The mastery of one assists in the mastery of the other.
