Dahlia Growers Will Form Society

Opportunity for all dahlia growers, both professional and amateur, for joining a permanent organization designed to advance the local interest and prestige of this matchless queen of the autumn flowers, is now open. As a result of the highly-successful show held at Meier & Frank's auditorium, last Wednesday and Thursday, a group of 50 of the foremost dahlia fans of this section, perfected the organization of the Columbia Valley Dahlia society which will embrace nine counties in Oregon and five or six in Washington.

W. P. Strandborg, of the Portland Electric Power company, was elected president of the society, G. A. Westgate, of Fisher, Wash., first vice president; Julius L. Meier, of Portland, second vice president, and A. L. Chenoweth, of Portland, secretary-treasurer. The three directors at large will be Mrs. E. E. Whitcomb and Ray W. Gill, of Portland, and Mrs. E. V. Miller of Vancouver, Wash.

This organization plans to affiliate at once with the American Dahlia society in order to give national standing to all awards made in the local shows which will be held each year in the latter part of September.

Last week's show at Portland brought together approximately 50,000 choice dahlia blooms, representing nearly 1000 different varieties in the seven leading types of dahlias. More than 40 classifications were represented in the show and over $700 worth of prizes were awarded the winners.

In the professional class, G. A. Westgate of Fisher, Wash., carried off the top honors, together with the grand sweepstake trophy, while in the amateur division, W. P. Strandborg, led the field as highest prize winner for the second year in succession.

More than 15,000 visitors attended the exhibit. The presiding judge at the show was Curtis M. Redfern, of San Francisco, vice president of the American Dahlia society and president of the Dahlia Society of California. He was assisted by Mrs. S. Pomeroy, of Seattle, another dahlia culturalist of national fame.

Judge Redfern said that he considered the local display one of the most representative and complete that he had ever judged and that Oregon raised dahlias that ranked fully as high, under national ratings, as many of those grown in California where dahlia shows have been a regular feature of floriculture for nearly 15 years.

Gresham dahlia growers who are interested in becoming members of the new society are requested to get in touch with W. P. Strandborg, president, 510 Electric Bldg., Portland.

The new dahlia society expects to have at least 1000 members by the end of the year.

PLEASANT HOME

Mr. and Mrs. A. Brander recently enjoyed a visit from an old country friend, Robert N. A. Kidd of the Cunard Steamship line. Mr. Kidd is a member of the auditing staff with headquarters at New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Markell were recent dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Al Haworth of the Kelso community.

The sub-district rally of the Epworth League which was held at the Methodist church Sunday afternoon and evening has been pronounced one of the most inspiring and enjoyable events of the season by those present. Two rousing song services were conducted with the assistance of two violinists, a saxophone and a piano. Two fine addresses were heard. The social hour and refreshments were very much enjoyed and appreciated as was the devotional meeting conducted by a member of the Rockwood League. At a business session the sub-district was duly organized and officers elected as follows: President, Lyle Mason, of Gresham; first vice president, Edith Olney of Rockwood; second vice president, George McAllister, of Gresham; third vice president, Elma Cook, of Pleasant Home; fourth vice president, Joe Drew, of Pleasant Home; secretary, Amy Cooper, of Gresham; treasurer, Orrie Eckert, of Rockwood. Lyle Mason by virtue of his office of president becomes a member of the Eastern District cabinet. The convention accepted the invitation of the Rockwood League to hold the next rally at that place and selected the date of the second Sunday in January.

Announcement was received this week of the birth of a 7½-pound daughter at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hale, of Boring. The little miss has been named Norma Mildred. Mrs. Hale will be remembered as Miss Eileen Sloop.

The farmers in this vicinity have been very busy the last week filling their silos. The corn is not of such good quality this year as usual owing to the late spring and cool nights during the summer. The early frost last week made it necessary to harvest the crop immediately.

Dale Altman spent the week-end at his home to assist his father in their corn harvest.

Wednesday, October 17, will be the annual grange day observed by Multnomah grange for betterment of the hall and grounds. All members are expected to be present.

Mrs. Charles McKinney and baby son came home last Friday from Gresham.

The Neilson family which formerly lived in the C. W. Stephens cottage, has returned to Pleasant Home and is occupying the house vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Mannon.

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Fairweather will be sorry to learn that three of their children are ill with diphtheria. The other children are being cared for by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Nelson, hoping in this way to escape the disease. Robert is seriously ill. June and Baby Bert are not having it so severely.

GRESHAM HAS BRIGHT FUTURE

(The following brief summary of the advantages of Gresham and vicinity, and prophecy of the future, was given as a five-minute address at a recent Kiwanis club luncheon in Gresham by Attorney C. G. Schneider, the author.)

An eminent eastern authority tells us that the Pacific coast, from California to northern Washington, will, within the next 50 years, be the scene of one of the greatest developments ever recorded. Due to its geographical location, its ready accessibility to world markets both by water and rail transportation, and because of climatic conditions it is only reasonable to expect that here, in what is known as the Pacific coast area, will some day be one of the densest centers of population to be found anywhere.

In this area are three major ports—San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. Of these three only one, Portland, has a fresh water harbor; this alone is a distinct advantage. But when we consider its temperate climate and its location with reference to the other ports it is not difficult to visualize the district in the vicinity of Portland as the hub from which may be expected to radiate an almost unprecedented growth and expansion.

We of Gresham are naturally most interested in the development that can be expected in the coming years in our immediate vicinity.

It may be of interest to know that Multnomah county is almost the same size and shape as the Canal zone and that of its total area about 140,000 acres can be cultivated. The county can be divided, roughly, into three divisions—the east one-third which is mountainous; the western one-third which is hilly and contains the city of Portland; and the central one-third which is relatively level, contains the best farm land of the county. Gresham, located as it is near the center of this district is in a position to take advantage of the rapid growth that we can confidently look forward to.

With the engineering ability that is available today it would be folly to say that rivers and hills offer insurmountable barriers to land transportation, nevertheless we avoid such obstacles wherever possible.

Gresham, located as it is with a mountainous district to the east, rolling country and the Clackamas river to the south and the hills of west Portland to the west—even though the proposed Tualatin valley tunnel is eventually constructed—with rail and water transportation to the north, and at the threshold of a great and growing city, has many advantages on which we should capitalize. Here are grown the finest berries and we offer no apology to the city of Woodburn in spite of the claim that it is 'The World's Berry Center'. We are producing a finer quality of walnuts than our much advertised neighbor, California, to the south, and no doubt will continue to excel in other lines of horticulture and agriculture. In addition to rail and water transportation, five paved highways radiate from Portland through the major portion of the district tributary to our city.

We have here a people who are good examples of the average American citizen, a people who are alert, progressive and tolerant, who vote as they please and bow to the will of the majority.

With this sort of a background the question that naturally presents itself is: What does the future offer Gresham and the adjacent territory?

Our main arterial highways will be widened to accommodate the ever increasing number of slow moving freight trucks in order that the present roads constructed originally for lighter passenger traffic can be used entirely for that purpose, thus minimizing accidents and speeding up traffic. Somewhere in the district between 82d street and Gresham will be located a landing field of sufficient size to accommodate the express and freight planes of the near future—a field which in area will dwarf the landing field at present in use in Portland, while in its vicinity and adjacent to the transcontinental rail lines on the north and water transportation on the Columbia will be developed an immense manufacturing district. It is quite possible also that the south bank of the Willamette will be dyked, with a wide boulevard traversing the top as a further aid to solving the traffic problems of the future.

We must admit that it is a matter of only a few years until Gresham and all the territory west to the present city limits of Portland will be a part of Portland but we can and should develop a community here that will reflect the sterling character of its citizens long after the boundary lines of our municipality have been obliterated by the inevitable expansion of our neighboring city on the west.
