A QUIET CAMPAIGN.

Except at intervals in the larger cities where the two great leaders have spoken, this has been a very quiet presidential campaign.

Something has taken the place of the former methods. It is the radio. The candidates themselves have delivered the great speeches and the millions have heard their voices, convictions and arguments on the great questions and policies involved in the campaign.

There are evidences that there has been more thinking on the part of voters, even if less show of enthusiasm, than heretofore and the voter cast on November 6 will be closer to an expression of voter intelligence in national principles than has usually been the case when voters have been swayed by local bursts of gusto.

A deeper political consciousness is observable. Policies are having more influence than politicians. The drifts brought out in the Digests' nation-wide poll show this fact.

In view of the broadcast of information and accurate analysis of conditions from the leading exponents of party policies it appears that this campaign is more like a big debate with the voters listening and judging both as to merits of the question and weight of argument.

No longer will one territorial section be pitted against another politically for all hear the same speakers and arguments from north and south and east to west. Think of it. This will be the first presidential election in which the radio has played an important and perhaps a decisive part.

SPRINGDALE

The P. W. L. A. lodge and the circle gave a card party at the hall Wednesday evening. About 35 were present, high honors went to Geo. Merston and Mrs. Jesse Rogers. Consolation to B. Knapp and Mrs. E. Van Buskirk. Luncheon was served and the men treated the women's circle to ice cream.

"Grandma" Stohler, who has been seriously ill, has been removed to the home of her son Lew Stohler at Beaverton, Oregon. She is improving in spite of her old age and serious illness.

Pete Christensen, brother of C. C. Christensen, is in a Portland hospital where he underwent an operation. He resides at Tigard, Oregon.

Springdale school is arranging for a program which will be given at the schoolhouse Friday evening, October 26, beginning promptly at 8 o'clock. After the program several booths and a grab bag will be in operation. The lunch boxes, each of which will contain lunch for two, will be "fished" from a pond.

The grade school girls' boxes will be taken from a separate pond from the older girls and women, and will be at a lower price. Much interest is being taken in the affair and a good patronage is expected.

HURLBURT

Fred Baumgartner, who has been ill for a week or more, is recovering slowly and expects to be able to be up and around soon.

W. J. Ellis and his sons, Robert and Richard, and Albert Davis returned from a hunting trip Friday with a deer. They were gone but one day.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Davis and daughters, Estelle and Nora, and Mrs. Fay Davis and son Bobby were visitors Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Lauderback at Pleasant Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson are down from Patterson, Wash. They are staying on their little home across from the old Emily home. Mr. and Mrs. G. Ward Evans were visitors at their place Sunday.

Hoover Fitted for Achievement

There are three epochs in Hoover's career which furnish a key to his present greatness and general worth. They are, his boyhood experiences, and accomplishments, his university career and his kick-off into the world of business responsibility. The wisdom of his decisions and the alertness of his contact with institutions and great men would be sufficient to predict a future of brilliant accomplishments.

We have touched upon the first two epochs and in this article we will touch upon the third.

After his graduation from Stanford University he went to Nevada City to secure a position on a technical staff but failed. College men were considered visionary and not in good repute with the old seasoned mining engineers. Hoover took work as a laborer along side of the Cornish miners, and worked enthusiastically, pushing a car and shoveling ore. Through this experience and his contact with the different stratas of miners he became familiar with the name and reputation of Louis Janin of San Francisco. Later he made his way to Janin's office and applied for a position and was assigned temporary office work pending returns from references and later was engaged.

In this position he was entrusted with many difficult pieces of work which he completed with distinction. In one case his report displayed such comprehensive and practical knowledge that Janin asked where he got the practical knowledge which was evident in the report. Hoover replied, "I worked underground in that mine pushing a car."

Later when gold was discovered in Australia Janin received a cable from a prominent British firm to send an expert engineer to introduce California methods into their western Australia properties—a young man preferred. Hoover, not yet 24 years old, was selected at a salary of $7500 per year with all expenses paid. This was a little over seven years after Professor Swam reported to Dr. Jordan, "a young Quaker, employed as a clerk in a Salem store in the back room of which he slept and studied up for college, none too well prepared but showing remarkable keenness"; and about 13 years since he landed at Newberg as an orphan with an intent to work his way through the Quaker academy.

Now we have before us some data upon which we can estimate Hoover. From a general utility clerk in a Salem store, "not too well prepared for college", his accomplishments sound like a fairy tale. In that brief period he acquired the educational and technical training and made the contacts with men who were not only able to estimate his qualities but placed him in a lucrative position at 24.

Upon his recommendation the firm purchased the mine "Sons of Twalia," which proved one of the best properties in the West Australian field. It paid dividends for 20 years. With increased salary Hoover was appointed to the management of the new mine with full authority to equip and develop it.

This increased responsibility called for large administrative ability. He had to create transportation, find water supply, solve labor problems, involving thousands of men. Can any one doubt that a man who made so much of himself in so short a time and has gone on doing things successfully in even larger fields of endeavor, is the best available man to guide the ship of state in the present epoch of this rapidly advancing democracy?
