DRIVEN BY NATURE

HOW PACIFIC COAST CITIES HAVE HARNESSED WATERFALLS.

Vast Power of Northern Rivers, Obedient to Engineering Skill, Forced to Do the Will of the Brain That Conquers.

Few people know that trains are run, along the Pacific coast, cities lighted and factory power obtained from harnessed waterfalls up in the Sierra mountains.

The engineering world has watched with interest the progress of the great South Yuba-Bear river development, which had its beginning in 1912 under authority from the California state railroad commission.

This work is again in progress and is said by engineers to be the finest enterprise in conserving national resources and in providing hydro-electric power in great quantities that has yet been undertaken in the West.

The idea of damming the waters of the South Yuba at that point occurred to electrical engineers many years ago, but the great disaster of 1906 and the troubles that followed caused the project to be temporarily abandoned.

From this it was proposed to utilize the water after its release into Bear river several times over in its course through mountain and valley down to the point of its arrival at the City of Auburn, some 47 miles below.

On Thanksgiving day, 1913, Vice President John A. Britton closed the switch which sent the electric energy humming along the wires from the newly constructed power plant in the Bear River gorge to the company's main high-tension distributing station at Cordelia, 110 miles away.

It was 5 a. m. He was starting the furnace fire at this unseemly hour.

Without warning a large lump of coal leaped from its berth on top of the coal pile and landed squarely on the captain of his toe brigade on the left foot.

He swore, cursed his luck, increased the white space on his face, and then—then—he began to smile. And his toe thumped like a stranded auto engine!

"Why, I really am lucky," he thought. "I'm lucky to have a coal pile big enough for a lump of coal to get a start on. Come on, do it again."

Mr. Carnegie's Escape. A well-known American clergyman tells an excellent story about the Laird of Skibo, when the latter was earning $300 a year as a telephone operator.

"Mr. Carnegie," recalls the cleric, "was a regular attendant at my business men's week-day services.

"One day, seeing him in the congregation, and unaware that he was not used to praying extempore, I said, after the first hymn: 'We will now be led in prayer by Brother Carnegie.' Mr. Carnegie rose, very red and flustered. 'Let us engage first of all,' he stammered, 'in silent prayer.' We all immediately bowed our heads and closed our eyes, and Mr. Carnegie, tiptoeing out, escaped."

Rough on Author. Mr. Pett Ridge tells a story against himself. He offered to send to a wounded soldier undergoing treatment in a hospital copies of his novels, but received the following reply:

Why They Laughed. The English teacher was in the habit of reading the day's lesson aloud before the pupils recited it.

The one preceding had been a mighty one, where Macbeth curses his luck and fate. Everyone was very much impressed with his wrath.

The teacher read on, not noticing the change of scene. "Thunder!" she exclaimed, and stopped.

A Short Story.

Says Ruth, "Let us at least wander together."

But Merrill doesn't want to wander that way.

Says he, "No." He exits Ruth-lessly, but Merrily! (The end.)—Jester.

It Works! Try It

Tells how to loosen a sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callous.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callous. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callous will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. If your druggist don't have freezone have him order it for you.

Shocked by T. R.'s Informality. Harry A. Franck, famous as a world wanderer, who has just returned from a four years' hike in South America, tells the following about the impression left by Colonel Roosevelt with the natives of Paraguay:

"I got near the trail of Colonel Roosevelt, though not nearer than a couple of hundred miles. He was on his trip to the River of Doubt and I heard much about him from the natives, and from two men who had been with him, Father Zahm and Mr. Sipp. I heard many yarns about Roosevelt. At one village, in the wildest part of Central South America, hundreds of miles from civilization and peopled only by a few Indians, the inhabitants, I was told, had been greatly shocked because the colonel walked about their streets without his coat on!"—New York Times.

GOT SAILORS' "GOATS"

REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE UNNERVED BRITISH SEAMEN.

Men Refused to Stay on Ship That in Their Opinion Had "Seen the Bottom of the Sea"—Vessel Held in Thick Mud.

Not so very long ago the appearance of a new island off the coast of Alaska brought to mind other rapid uprisings of land on the ocean.

An island suddenly came to light off the coast of Sicily, remained for two months and as quickly disappeared. Sabrina, near the Azores, retired from public life before it had been fairly charted. The Gulf of Mexico has witnessed the advent and subsidence of small islands. These upheavals of the bed of the ocean suggests all sorts of mysteries connected with the unknown depths.

The vessel was out twenty-three days from Manila to the Hawaiian islands. It was a silent, dead-black night. The lead showed a deep sea. Suddenly those on board felt as though they had grounded.

Daybreak revealed a low and misty sky. The Britisher lay as if becalmed in the midst of an oily sea strangely discolored in patches. Suddenly the water, to use the words of the master, "trembled." The ship rolled, and in the distance rose a huge balloon-shaped mass of vapor, steam or smoke. There was not the slightest sound, but a long line of cabling water stretched across the streaky calmness.

Then the vapor settled over all, and the ship's company could hear but not see the seething and pouring water all about them. The captain ordered a bucketful to be drawn up. It was hot and smelled like the product of a gasworks. Whereupon the captain remarked that "a new continent was being poked up," adding that he wished himself well out of the way.

The air grew more oppressive every moment. The vessel gave a gentle side roll and word went round that the ship was aground. Over went the lead and came up covered with blue, oozy mud. The Britisher was wallowing in sludge, the darkness was pall-like and the atmosphere suffocatingly close. Then the air was rent with reports dreadful to hear in that darkness. There were three of these blasts and all was still again.

When the light came, red and unnatural, a strange sight met the eyes of those on board. It was as if the bottom of the Pacific had been laid bare. They were helpless in a sea of thick mud. The sulphur fumes were choking and all had to take refuge below. Hour after hour they gasped, facing the probability of a death by suffocation. Suddenly they felt that they were afloat. The bank of mud that held them had disappeared and after a time the Britisher made her way out of the gruesome spot.

When Honolulu was reached the crew deserted, for they held that there was no luck in a ship that had "seen the bottom of the sea."

Cape Cod Canal a Success.

The government test of the Cape Cod canal has been declared a success. Two submarines made the trip from Boston to Newport at the rate of eleven miles an hour, and at a great saving of time, as compared with the outside route. The eight-mile trip through the canal was made in forty-five minutes, and by using this passage the submarines saved six miles of distance and avoided much rough weather.

The Kiel canal was built by the Germans at a cost approaching $100,000,000, mainly for strategic purposes; yet it is a fact that the reduction of distance between the German base in the Baltic and the North sea by this canal is little greater than the gain to the American fleet, which would result from the enlargement of Cape Cod canal to accommodate our battleships between those two important strategic centers, Newport and Boston.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, cold; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

WOMAN SICK TWO YEARS

Could Do No Work. Now Strong as a Man.

Chicago, Ill.—"For about two years I suffered from a female trouble so I was unable to walk or do any of my own work. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and determined to try it. It brought almost immediate relief. My weakness has entirely disappeared and I never had better health. I weigh 165 pounds and am as strong as a man. I think money is well spent which purchases Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. J. O'BRYAN, 1765 Newport Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.
