Milton A. Miller, collector of internal revenue for the state of Oregon, has been notified by the treasury department at Washington, D. C., that the time for filing the 1917 income tax returns, including individuals and corporations, has been extended to April 1, 1918, thus giving an additional month to that provided by the war tax act of October 3, 1917. As soon as the blanks are received each corporation will be notified. Collector Miller would appreciate the early filing of returns, so that the work of his office may not be unduly congested.

Through the courtesy of the Honor Guard girls, who have worked diligently to secure authentic addresses of all the army and navy boys who went from here, The Herald is enabled this week to give a complete list of Hermiston's young patriots. A typewritten copy of the names and addresses have been sent by the Honor Guard to each of the boys for the purpose of enabling them to write to one another. Any relative being apprised of a change of address from this list will confer a favor by informing The Herald or Mr. Porter at the rest rooms. The list appears in another column.

Mrs. B. Hageline entertained last Sunday in honor of her mother, Mrs. Sarah Frick, at a 12 o'clock birthday dinner. Those present were the Jor. John and George Royer families of Pilot Rock, the three gentlemen being brothers of Mrs. Frick and prominent business men of that town, who made the trip over by auto in three hours. After partaking of a sumptuous turkey dinner the party proceeded on a tour of the Hermiston country and were pleased and impressed with what they say, especially with Geo. Strohm's prospects to help Hooverize in the way of pork. The dinner was characteristic, inasmuch as it was the first time Mrs. Frick had the privilege of eating a meal with all three brothers at the same table. She is the oldest and George the youngest of a large family, and upon making this visit to Oregon it is the second time in life she met this same brother, the first time in 1905 on her trip west, when he was a young man. This time, however, she met Mrs. Geo., as another bachelor fell a victim to Dan Cupid. After much merriment and good wishes the party went happily on their way homeward.
