Oregon News Notes

ANNOUNCEMENT OF CONTRACTS FOR LEASING several western railroad systems is forcing many tie mills in the Willamette and Lewis valley to shut down, according to report of O. H. Ball of the Western Oregon Tie & Lumber association. Forty mills already are idle, Mr. Ball says, and unless conditions improve at once 40 to 50 more will be obliged to suspend operations.

If Governor Olcott should resign as secretary of state, he would relinquish his right to serve as governor and would hold neither office, according to the legal contention of Frank S. Grant, former city attorney of Portland, who filed an amicus curiae brief in the supreme court relative to the mandamus proceedings recently instituted by Governor Olcott to determine his rights and duties as governor.

The increasing demand for loganberry juice as a beverage and the high price paid for loganberries by manufacturing concerns of the Pacific coast are arousing interest in the possibilities of loganberry culture in the North Bend section. Experiments made in loganberry culture there have demonstrated that the yield is more prolific and the berries are superior in juice producing properties, than in other well-known loganberry sections of the coast.

According to figures just compiled by A. C. Petersen, manager of the northwest properties of the California Packing corporation, with headquarters in Dallas, the Dallas plant processed and packed during the season just closed a total of 9,757,789 pounds of prunes. Most of the prunes packed were grown in the vicinity of Dallas and represented the largest crop of prunes ever harvested in Polk county. Prospects are good for a still larger crop of prunes this year.

That the Indians of the Klamath reservation will oppose the construction of the proposed Link river dam by the California-Oregon Power company, on the ground that it threatens the overflow and will prevent drainage of many of the lands around Modoc Point and Wood river valley, on which irrigation and drainage assessments have already been made, is the report of Secretary Clayton Kirk, of the Klamath Reservation Council, following a meeting at the Klamath agency.

Data on the practicability and advisability of extension of the Natron cut-off over the Cascades from Oakridge to the terminus of the extension above Klamath Falls, together with the distance the line is already built, the extent of grading done and distance of track to be laid between the two terminals, was forwarded by telegraph by the Eugene chamber of commerce to Senator McNary. This was done at the request of the senator, who wired to the commercial club at Klamath Falls for such information. As the figures were more easily obtained at Eugene, that organization was requested to submit them.
