IRRIGON NEWS ITEMS

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

About a dozen automobile loads of people came down from Prosser, Washington Saturday to celebrate the opening of the ferry between the Holmes landing and a point just below Irrigon. The County Commissioners and members of Prosser Commercial club of Benton county were among the party and viewed the landing on both sides of the Columbia and roads which lead to the landing. The ferry is now in operation and the road leading to the landing from Oregon side, leaves the Columbia highway about one and one-quarter miles west of Irrigon.

The committee of the Farm Bureau on North Morrow county Fair arrangements to be held at Boardman this year, met with the committee at Boardman Saturday evening and made considerable progress on the plans for this year's fair. Another meeting will be held at Irrigon by this committee Saturday, May 21. Men and women who are to see this work have established reputation of making things move and we may be assured it will be a success.

Mr. W. R. Walpole reports the sale of 8 1/2 acres just east of town on the Columbia highway to Stanley A. Anderston. Mr. Anderston has been in Irrigon more or less for a number of years and has decided this place is good enough for him. He will build on the place at once and will run a chicken ranch and probably some garden stuff.

Mr. and Mrs. Doering, son Edgar and Mrs. Harper of Boardman were among the Boardman visitors at the school exercises.

Mrs. E. C. Helmeck of Pendleton has spent the week with the Markhams.

Mrs. M. E. Rand of Linnton, Oregon is visiting with her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Walpole.

Mr. A. Ives of Portland, who was nursery man in Irrigon in the early days, spent two or three days visiting friends and looking after his interests here last week.

This is one of the seasons Irrigon people should be raising strawberries.

Mr. Frank Rider is selling strawberries now and getting fancy prices. Mrs. Blanche Watkins gathered enough strawberries from her small patch on May tenth to make a nice short cake. This is about the same time the first berries were reported shipped from Ridder, Oregon and followed by other points in Southern Oregon. There has not been any strawberry crop failure in the district and only once or twice, has the price been too low to handle profitably.

Last Friday night the juniors gave the annual prom in honor of the senior class. The hall was beautifully decorated with shrubbery and flowers. Baskets of greenery hung from the ceiling. The lights were covered with red paper to cast a rosy glow over the room. The orchestra enclosed with a hedge of snowballs and willows, was placed in the center of the floor. The color scheme was carried out in blue and white, the senior colors. Dancing and cards were the entertainment of the evening. About fifty guests including the high school faculty were there. All reported a very good time.

Mrs. C. S. McNaught, Mrs. H. T. Fraser, Mrs. J. D. Watson, Mrs. B. S. Kingsley, Mrs. Rena Waterman, were the patronesses. Music was furnished by a local orchestra consisting of Marian Briggs, John Watson, Leo Smith and Mr. Voelker.

Last Thursday Mr. Ward, a Pendleton photographer, was at the local school house taking pictures of the senior class.

Miss Dorothy Holland was delightfully surprised Monday evening, May 16 by twelve of her friends who gathered at her home to surprise her, in honor of her birthday. The guests were entertained with music, dancing and games after which the birthday cake was cut by the hostess and delightful refreshments were served.

Veritable "Immigrant Market"

Many and devious are the tactics employed in Omaha and Kansas City by western states in an effort to attract settlers to their undeveloped lands—to such an extent, in fact, that a veritable "immigrant market" has developed in these twin gateways to the far west, according to preliminary reports received by the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce from the representatives in the middle west.

The States of Texas, Idaho, Wyoming, Western Kansas and Nebraska and California are leaving no stones unturned in their efforts to divert prospective settlers to their various communities, according to the report. Attractive literature available in large quantities at strategic points, and advertisements running in eastern papers of large circulation, indicate that large amounts of money are being expended.

The report carries with it a suggestion that there is a vital need for a more aggressive and systematic program in regard to settling the irrigated sections of the state.

"I doubt very much," writes J. R. Heuring in his report from Omaha, "if the average man in Oregon has given any thought to the fact that it is the easiest thing in the world to build an irrigation project, and the hardest thing in the world to induce a man to move his family into a district and make himself and family a farm and home, and unless Oregon realizes the seriousness of this phase of the irrigation program that they are inaugurating, I would not venture to predict the successful outcome of any irrigation project that is completed, or that is about to be constructed, in the state of Oregon."

As a specific example of the above statement, the report cites the fact that on county in Colorado is now running an advertisement in a great many eastern papers offering irrigated farms for nothing down and nothing but interest to pay for a period of five years.

While this state has undoubtedly suffered in the past through lack of aggressive advertising as compared to competitive states, the interests of Oregon are well protected this year through having a representative on the ground. According to the report, there is a definite and consistent demand for information and literature in regard to the state in spite of the strenuous efforts put forth by other states to divert these homeseekers to other localities.

"I trust that from this brief outline of the competitive conditions that exist at this time," concludes the report, "Some action can be taken by the state at large to help along in this movement which we are now getting under headway, for more people means less taxation; more people mean more manufacturing; more people mean more money to spend. There are a thousand ways in which this can be discussed, but above all else, discussion will yield nothing if some action is not taken to secure desirable homeseekers and citizens for Oregon."

General Pershing Canvas by Maj. Albert De Kossak

When Kaiser Wilhelm, sitting astride a hobby horse in Potsdam, posed for Maj. Albert de Kossak many years ago, he little dreamed that one day De Kossak would paint the general who was destined to help overthrow the mighty armies of Germany. Yet that is what happened, only instead of posing for the artist, as the one-time kaiser did, on a wooden horse, General Pershing was sketched on his lively chestnut thoroughbred, Kedore. Major De Kossak is seen putting the finishing touches to the canvas, which when finished will be presented to the United States Military academy at West Point by the Polish artist, on behalf of Poland.
