RIPLEY, STAR VILLAIN, CURSES FRANK MAYO

Ray Ripley, the handsome scoundrel of a half dozen recent screen successes, is again exercising his wiles in the films, and this time his villainy is directed against Frank Mayo, who is starring in "The Marriage Pit," coming to the Play House Wednesday, June 1st.

Ray Ripley has only been in pictures about fifteen months, but every part he has played has raised him higher in the estimation of the public. He first appeared on the screen in "The Belgian," with Walker Whiteside, and then with Theda Bara in "Under Two Flags." His first appearance at Universal City occurred just a year ago when he played opposite Lieutenant Locklear in the first photodrama of the clouds "The Great Air Robbery." He played the heavy in that story taking almost as many chances in mid-air as the intrepid aviator who recently lost his life.

In this connection it might be interesting to note that Locklear and Ripley shared a house in Hollywood for some months last winter, and when Ray heard of the death of his pal he was so deeply affected that the director excused him from the set for two days.

Ray Ripley was born in New York but his family moved west when he was quite young. He attended the schools of Portland, and graduated from the O. A. C. He first went on the stage with a western stock company and soon found himself back in New York. He was featured in a number of stage productions, among them "The Third Degree," "Kindling" and "Parlor, Bed-room and Bath."

In "The Marriage Pit," Ray Ripley has his second roll opposite Frank Mayo. He will be remembered as the apparent villain in "The Girl in 29," a recent Mayo feature.

Weinstock Will Speak

Colonel Harris Weinstock, noted figure in cooperative movements and ex-state market director of California, will deliver a series of lectures on cooperative marketing at O. A. C. Farmers week, June 13-18. He has been actively engaged in agriculture ever since 1888. He was a member of California's first state board of horticulture, and has been on many boards and commissions for investigation of labor and agricultural problems. He was also one of President Wilson's American commissioners appointed in 1902 to investigate the European system of rural credits. He was later appointed to investigate I. W. W. activities in California. He is widely known as organizer and president of the first big mail order house in America, Weinstock, Lubin & Company.

Worrying

The hardest part of any job
Is worrying about it;
Your joy to kill, your rest to rob,
Is worrying about it;
The lowest spot to view a hill
Is from the bottom; higher still
It looks each moment that you kill
In worrying about it.

But, if you start to climb, you soon
Quit worrying about it.
Quit waiting, wishing for the moon
And worrying about it.
A human task just grows and grows
By putting off; time may disclose
'Twas easier than you suppose—
Quit worrying about it.

Just bundle up and buckle in—
Quit worrying about it.
By work, not worry, you will win—
Quit worrying about it.
A task is easy, once begun;
It has its labors and its fun;
So grab a hold and do it, son—
Quit worrying about it.
