FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

Every citizen's call to arms, devote your time to this public service. October 2 to 9 is Fire Prevention week. Will you enlist in the patriotic crusade to overcome the unnecessary fire waste of the nation, almost entirely caused by carelessness?

Property loss during 1921 $500,000,000.

Casualty list: 15,000 burned to death, 25,000 maimed, bruised, injured.

Sixty-five per cent of all fires occur in the home, hence women and children make up the great per cent of casualties.

Yours for Safety and Conservation.

INDIAN GIRL IS RICH

Oil Sends Her From Poverty to Wealth in Two Months.

But $2,000-a-Day Income Has Not Turned Her Head—Ambition is to Be Farmerette and Drive a Tractor.

Muskogee, Okla.—"Here's one little Indian girl who is not going to be sinned by the bright lights nor the Great White Way," said Exle Fife, nineteen-year-old Creek, when told that her allotment in Creek county had produced its fourth gusher and lifted her income from royalties to near $2,000 a day.

Exle's production now averages about 4,000 barrels of crude daily. How much Exle has become worth since the first producer was brought in on her land two months ago she herself does not know. Only the officials of the Indian agency, where her money is handled, know, and they are not telling it for publication.

Exle received the news of her fourth gusher just as the carpenters were driving in the last nails of her modest new five-room bungalow that Uncle Sam decided to build for her down at Fame, in McIntosh county, when oil royalties began to pour in to Exle's credit. The house harmonizes with Exle's simplicity.

"In the fall I am going to study music and will possibly go to a finishing school," said Exle. "I am also going to send my brother to some big college. I want him to be somebody. I am going to continue to make Fame my home, no matter how many millions of dollars I make out of oil. I have lived here since childhood and riches will never tempt me to move. I am always going to stay a country girl."

"No, I don't care to travel; at least not now. Some time later on I probably will take a trip, but I assure you that it's not going to be a money-spending orgy."

"What do I want to be? I want to be a farmerette, as you city folks say. I want about five hundred or a thousand acres, stocked with sleek, purebred cattle, and waving fields of corn and grain. Then I want a flock of puffing tractors, with this little girl behind the biggest one of them all. That's the life for me."

Seven more wells are drilling and oil men say the allotment should be good for about forty wells. Indian agency officials, even in these days of low-priced crude, forecast an income of $5,000 a day for Exle within the very near future.

And Exle is about as remarkable as her luck. Although she was a pauper two months ago, her good fortune has made little change in her. She is utterly devoid of extravagance. True, she wears better clothes and has a big red-wheeled automobile to carry her from Fame to Muskogee to get her monthly check from the agency, but that's about all.

Use for Mummified Cats.

Some years ago a considerable trade was carried on between Great Britain and Egypt in mummified cats! The cat was a semi-sacred creature among the ancient Egyptians and because they symbolized wakefulness, stealthiness and craft they were held to be special favorites of the gods of sleep and of the land of the dead. When they died they were carefully treated by the undertakers of that day, and after careful embalming were buried in great vaults. The degenerates, or more enlightened descendants of the ancient Egyptians—however one cares to consider them in their attitude toward their forefathers' beliefs—made merchandise of the mummies of the cats, and sold them in shiploads to be ground up and converted into fertilizers for the soil. There was found to be no truth in a story that human remains were occasionally found among the embalmed pussies.

"They Don't Answer"

When the telephone operator says, "They don't answer," it is after a sincere endeavor to get your party. She cannot compel an answer.

The party called may be unwilling to leave a particular household duty—may be in another part of the home beyond closed doors—may be chatting with a neighbor—may be marketing—may be slow in answering. Strange, but true, calls are sometimes designedly unanswered.

Telephone records show that the great majority of "don't answer" reports come from residence calls. In business, where it is a matter of dollars and cents, it is always the assigned duty of some one to be within sound of the telephone bell.

"They don't answer" is the statement of a situation absolutely beyond the control of the telephone operator.

Stocking Parlor Aquarium.

The best water for an aquarium is from a river, stream or pond. Rain water which has been exposed for some time to the air is also excellent, but the exposure must be of some length to render it safe. If water is taken from a hydrant, it should first flow with full force into a bucket, so that it may be thoroughly aerated. Under no circumstances ought pump-water to be used, as it is what is commonly called "dead," that is without aeration.

If the aquarium is to contain goldfish, or other species that will live in still water, it is unnecessary to change the water frequently, especially if the tank be well-provided with suitable aquatic plants. Simply replace that which has been lost through evaporation from time to time. If care be exercised and the aquarium kept clean, a complete change of water is only necessary about once in six months. It would be well to introduce at first a few snails and tadpoles, and then, after two or three days, the fish.
