Hawthorn Respected in Ireland. Whitethorn, or, as it is better known, hawthorn, blooms in May. Its blossoms are much whiter than those of the blackthorn, and have a delicious perfume.

In Ireland hawthorns are regarded with much respect as belonging to the fairies, and certain large trees all over the country are known as "geniety bushes," geniety being a name by which fairies are sometimes designated, says the Detroit News. The cutting down of one of these old thorns was supposed to bring bad luck. In Sir Samuel Ferguson's poem, "The Fairy Thorn," reference is made to the disappearance of one Anna Grace, who went to a dance under one of the ancient bushes.

It is likewise believed that to carry a spray of hawthorn into a house forbodes the coming of death to one of the inmates. In the south of England the fruit is called "pixies' pears."

Our Favorite Recipe.

"How many of you evict the skunks from under our house?" is the somewhat startling question asked by a reader of an agricultural magazine. Another reader, from the depths of a wider experience, answers the question thus: See that the wall is tight where they live, but leave an opening for them to go out. Take a bottle of household ammonia, pull out the cork, slip a long stick in its place, and shove the bottle into the skunk's habitation. Raise the stick and smash the bottle. The skunks will all march out, saying: "Our odor may be a little disagreeable to our enemies, but here they are using poison gas on us! We call that low down!" They dislike the fumes so much that it is said they never come back.—The Outlook.

Nickel Plating.
The object to be nickel plated is made the cathode of a battery or dynamo delivering a current of about six volts. A piece of nickel is made the anode. The electrolyte between the poles of the dynamo is a solution of soluble salt of nickel. The passing of the current from the anode through the solution to the cathode causes a deposit of nickel on the object.

STAND TORTURE FOR BEAUTY

Many Paris Women Think Nothing of Having Their Noses Broken and Reset.

Parisiennes are going to such lengths to achieve beauty as quite to put in the shade the painful operation of "dimpling" (making a hole in the chin by means of a drugged needle).

Many women think nothing of having their noses broken and reset in a different shape, says a Paris correspondent. Others actually have the eyebrows moved upward or downward, as the fancy dictates. This necessitates a complete removal of the hair and either a false and forced growth in a different position or makeup.

One beauty expert, who undertakes to change the form of a woman's lips, has performed many operations. His latest experiment is to make the upper lip turn up, giving it an alluring pout.

To do this he stretches a thin hair from the upper lip to the tip of the nose. This effect, naturally, is limited to actresses, who use it on the stage only.

Some fashionable women are being laughed at for their insistence on having their cosmetics flavored. One has her lip-rouge tasting of banana.

When Your Range Wears Out—Consider Why

Is it broken?
Is it rusted out?
Has it grown so wasteful of fuel and generally unsatisfactory that you have to discard it?
Or, is it getting to look so bad that you just want a new one?
No matter what your experience has been, note this: Whatever the reason is for discarding your old range—that thing cannot possibly happen to the Monarch.
The Monarch is made of malleable iron that cannot break.
The Monarch is protected against rusting out by its Vitrifused Flues.
The Monarch's riveted joints stay tight forever so that it gives the same satisfactory and economical service after years of use as when new.
The Monarch is easy to keep clean and looking like new for many, many years.
Come and let us tell you all about this wonderful range. Our prices are most attractive—investigate them now.
