HERMISTON'S HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SERVICE

PROPER HOUSING MEANS MORE PROFITS IN HOG RAISING

The Hog needs protection more than most domestic animals because it lacks natural protection, and is very susceptible to the influence of cold, heat and drafts.

Hog houses should have tight walls, roofs, doors and windows, abundant sunlight, well drained floors and plenty of fresh air without drafts. They should be strongly built of good materials.

Frame construction meets all these requirements and Tum-A-Lum is recommended because it is carefully and accurately made, is strong, durable, dependable and will give long honest service.

Picture of Hog House here shown is only one of the many properly designed styles that our architectural department has developed out.

VILLAGE OF CHESS PLAYERS

Everybody in Stroesbeck, Germany Plays Chess and it is Taught in Schools.

Stroesbeck, Germany, a little peasant village of 1,500 souls, boasts that it contains not a man, woman or child of school age who does not play the ancient game of chess, says a correspondent of the New York Tribune. Even the small children have kings, queens, knights and pawns as play things. Stroesbeck's fondness of chess dates back to the Eleventh century, so the story goes, when Count Gunnellin of the Wendish tribe, held here as a prisoner of the bishop of Magdeburg made his own chess board and taught his prison guards to play.

Chess is taught in the schools and the children carry their chess books and their chess boards like children in the United States carry grammars or arithmetics and slates. Pupils in the elementary classes in Stroesbeck must pass an examination in chess and to the winners of the contests the village authorities give prizes—chess boards and pieces.

Chess boards are painted on the houses, inside and out, the dining tables and the sitting room tables. In nearly all homes are chess boards themselves, and even the decorations on the walls of the houses are drawings or paintings of "some great game" locally, or unusual play of checkmate by some player of renown.

Though Stroesbeck has been playing chess all these centuries, none of its citizens has ever attracted more than local fame. But the names of the world chess masters are almost sacred here and the life of each is known to every child.
