Shakespeare House is Restored With Stucco

Restoration of a building at Stratford-on-Avon, recently carried out by the new owners, will preserve a structure closely identified with the life of William Shakespeare, according to a writer in Concrete. The author points out that the enterprise answers in a way a question asked by Shakespeare in one of his plays, when he inquires as to what evil endure "against the tooth of time and rature of oblivion."

Judith Shakespeare, daughter of William Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway, after her marriage to Thomas Quiney, winter, lived for thirty-six years in a house at 1 High street, Stratford-on-Avon," says the article in Concrete. "This house was an Elizabethan dwelling, half-timbered, with overhung eaves and gables and the usual face of oak and plaster. "Early in the last century an attempt was made to 'restore' it but the result was very unsatisfactory. It was recently rescued from its state of conspicuous ugliness by W. H. Smith & Son, book sellers, and the present tenants of the premises. The restoration was carried out with Portland cement stucco, with remarkably pleasing results.

"The house of Judith Shakespeare is owned by the Stratford-on-Avon corporation, and forms part of the Guilding estate. Half of the rent of the building goes to the King Edward school, as it did in the days when Shakespeare was a schoolboy there."

German Tried Suicide Vainly in Various Ways

A young man with the talent of a cat for remaining alive was tried in Hamburg, Germany, for attempted murder and suicide.

At twenty-one he had found his marriage a failure and he determined to end his life. Accordingly he threw himself in front of an underground train, which passed over him without hurting even a hair of his head.

He then went home and shot his wife. He saw the blood gush from her forehead and pulled the trigger. The revolver did not go off, and he therefore went out of the room, which was on the fifth floor of a house, threw himself over the balustrade, and landed, safe and sound, if a little breathless, on the ground floor.

He was able to go on foot to the police station with the policeman who just at that moment had arrived to arrest him.

His wife's wound proved merely skin deep, and the Hamburg court, which was impressed by the story of his vitality, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, let him off with three months' imprisonment for carrying firearms without a license.

How Barrie "Began"

An English paper recently printed the following story of how James M. Barrie "began."

A keen young editor eager to make his magazine immortal and so continually on the lookout for new contributors, saw a series of anonymous letters from a schoolboy in an evening paper. They were racy to a degree, so he unearthed the author and bade him appear in the editorial sanctum.

Next morning a young Scot walked in, fresh from a sojourn in Nottingham, where he had been "London correspondent" of a local rag. He was pale, reticent, nervous and shy, but willingly agreed to try his hand at the fresh series suggested to him by one he regarded as at the top of the ladder.

This young author, "dewy from his native heather," was an obscure writer of the name of Barrie.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Mystery in Copper Mass

The largest mass of native copper in the world, recently discovered by a Houghton county farmer, is now in possession of the University of Michigan. It weighs 483 pounds and is 42 inches in height, 82 inches wide and about three inches thick. It bears the facial outline of an Indian. To this likeness it is believed some one centuries ago added a human touch by bending back parts of the edge.

The nugget was obtained by the university at the market price of copper, says the New York Post. It was not until it was photographed that the "face" and full value were discovered.

Too Much to Ask of Them

The orchestra was practicing the composer's long and tedious piece when he arrived.

"What's this?" he demanded from the doorway. "I can hear only the violins, not the wind instruments."

"It's too hard a job for the wind instruments," replied the orchestra leader. "They can't blow and yawn at the same time."

A Pattern for Nurse

A woman who took her little daughter out to tea was surprised to see her trying to put a thin piece of bread and butter into her pocket.

"Whatever are you trying to do?" asked the shocked mother.

"I thought I would take this home to nurse for a pattern," replied the little girl.

A New Sport

Coach—Why didn't you turn out for track practice yesterday?
Mark Johnson—I had a date, sir.
Coach—Had a date, did you?
Mark Johnson—Yes, sir, but I didn't break training. A miss is as good as a mile, you know.

Test for Eggs

Mrs. Newbride (telephoning): "I'm afraid you sent me ducks' eggs this morning instead of hens' eggs."
Grocer—Ducks' eggs, ma'am! I don't keep ducks' eggs.
Mrs. Newbride—But I tested them. I dropped them in water and they floated.

Played Second Fiddle

The Frenchman had been presented to the mayor of Puddlebury, to which town he had come to reside.

"Ah, sir, permit me ze honor of giving you my felicitations, and to your talented family likewise. Ze music it ees a beautiful gift, and I hope to have ze honor of harking some day of your performance."

"Pardon, m'sieur," said the mystified mayor, "you are mistaken. I know nothing whatever of music."

"Ah, but zat ees vat you call hang back—you are modest. I have hear eel several couples of times zat your wife plays ze first violin, and zat you plays ze second fiddle to 'er!"

Like Toast

"Mamma," said the little boy who had been sent to dry a towel before the fire, "is it done when it is brown?"
