Leacock Tells How to Help Son Get Lessons

The greatest nuisance of all to the schoolmaster is the parent who does his boy's home exercises and works his boy's sums. I suppose they mean well by it. But it is a disastrous thing to do for any child. Whenever I found myself correcting exercises that had obviously been done for the boys in their homes I used to say to them: "Paul tell your father that he must use the ablative after pro." "Yes, sir," says the boy. "And Edward, you tell your grandmother that her use of the dative case simply won't do. She's getting along nicely and I'm satisfied with the way she's doing, but I cannot have her using the dative right and left on every occasion. Tell her it won't do." "Yes, sir," says little Edward.

I remember one case in particular of a parent who did not do the boy's exercise, but, after letting the boy do it himself, wrote across the face of it a withering comment addressed to me and reading: "From this exercise you can see that my boy, after six months of your teaching, is completely ignorant. How do you account for it?" I sent the exercise back to him with the added note: "I think it must be hereditary."—Stephen Leacock, in College Days.

Romantic Story of Old London Jacobite Bank

One of the most romantic stories in banking history is recalled by the announcement that the business of Messrs. Drummond of Charing Cross, the old-established private bankers, has many associations with the Jacobites. Indeed, its founder, Andrew Drummond, is believed to have been a Jacobite first and a banker afterward. It is at least certain that he walked from Edinburgh to London, with a price on his head, bearing funds to be used to secure the restoration of the Stuarts. The Maianca cane with a gold crutch handle which he carried with him on this adventurous journey still hangs, a treasured possession, in the bank parlor.

The old banker probably thought of this journey and of the risks he had run in taking it, when Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat, the "old fox" of the highlands, passed the bank on his way to the tower after the "forty-five." Lovat, whose gray hairs did not save him from the scaffold, had been on the books of the firm.

As he passed the bank windows Robert and Henry Drummond looked out to see him, but Andrew sat still at his desk. "I suppose you would run out to watch me if I was to be beheaded," he remarked, dryly.

Survivor of Indian Massacre

Ross Tanner, who is now living at Amaranth, Man., has spent the last few years trying to locate any of his relatives. He is the sole survivor of the Indian massacre at Redwood, Minn., in 1862. As a baby he was picked up out of the bloody mud and brought to Canada by one of the Sioux women.

At the age of ten he found out that he was not an Indian and ran away from the Sioux. He hid in badger holes during the day and traveled at night until he came across a roving band of buffalo hunters. He joined them.

He thinks that he got the name Tanner from the fact that he was given the job of curing buffalo hides, says Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance in an article of the Indians of the Northwest in the Mentor.

Reasoning

An interesting illustration of the processes of reasoning by which scientific conclusions are sometimes attained is afforded by the case of the human skull discovered some years ago at Chapelle-aux-Saints, in France, which, in the opinion of some, is probably the oldest bodily relic of prehistoric man. This skull shows many of the characteristics of that of a monkey, but little indication of intelligence. Careful examination, however, revealed a slight excess of size of the left hemisphere, from which it was argued that the owner of the skull was right-handed, and consequently a user of tools, a conclusion which is thought to be supported by the fact that ancient stone implements were found in the neighborhood.

A Good Sport

A guide one day, while working on a log drive, fell into the water. At last dizzy and nearly exhausted from his struggle, he managed to grasp a big log and hold on to it. The current was so strong and swift that it swept his body under the log until his feet stuck out on the other side.

Just as a comrade, who had run to his assistance, grasped him by the shoulders, he caught sight of his own feet protruding on the other side of the log.

"I can hold on a bit longer, Jim!" he gasped. "Save the poor fellow that's in head first, if you can."—Tatler.

An Exciting Sport

Lieut. David Rittenhouse, holder of the world's seaplane record, said in Washington the other day: "Flying is very interesting sport—rough, dangerous, but very interesting. It's like the life of the young millionaire."

"Have you had an interesting life?" a lady asked this chap. "You bet I have," said he. "I've gone through four marriages and three divorces and two fortunes and five sanitariums."
