Bordered Flannels
for Simple Day Frocks

As a successor to the wash silks and cotton broadcloths that made such a sweeping success in simple summer frocks nothing looks more promising than the bordered flannels—now offered for fall. New shades of strong dyes, warm browns, Russian and other greens, in addition to dark, tape colors, make a fine background for striped borders, in gay colors, that are used as a decoration on these simple flannel frocks. Everything about them spells success, especially for schoolgirls' dresses, of which an example is pictured. The border is used to outline a shirt-bosom front and in bands on collar and cuffs on a straight-line model with girdle of the material.

Fall Blouses Promote the Two-Piece Mode

Jumper dresses, blouses and sweaters (to be worn with separate skirts) help to maintain the prestige of the two-piece mode in apparel for ordinary daily wear. The return of navy to favor this fall is another factor that contributes much to the success of blouses. This conservative but spirited color, is the best of all selections for utility wear and makes a fine background for enlivening trimmings. A blouse of navy canton crepe is shown in the picture with handings of Persian crepe. It is very simple to make and very pleasing in design. Worn with navy worsted skirt, with inverted plaits at the front and sides, it makes an irreproachable costume for business or day-time wear.
