OVER THE OFFICE TRANSMOM
 A Chatty Column of Comment In Which the Editor is Likely To Think Aloud.

The other night at Pendleton when the members of the land settlement committee of the Portland Chamber of Commerce were guests of the commercial association, along with representatives from towns in Umatilla and Morrow counties, C. C. Gignoux, agricultural specialist of the Union Pacific System, made a statement that is of much import to the Umatilla project.

The Petaluma district in California, a body of land 15 miles long by six miles wide, last year sold poultry products from its ranches having an aggregate value of $25,000,000. Turn those figures over a couple of times in your mind. Then remember that the production of this little district was just about twice the amount of Umatilla county's entire agricultural production.

One of the greatest possibilities of the Greater Umatilla project lies in the development of the poultry production. H. E. Cosby, poultry specialist of Oregon Agricultural college, recognized as one of the best men in his line in the entire west, as "hard-boiled" and matter-of-fact a man as one will meet in a long journey, has stated repeatedly that natural conditions in this big district favor it as one of the finest locations for big scale poultry production in the United States.

Changes are being made so rapidly to bring about a realization of our possibilities here in this line that it is necessary to stop and think about them to get their full significance.

Six years ago when poultry production was first talked, there was one commercial chicken plant in this whole district. Today there are scores with additions made every year.

At that time marketing was a matter of the individual doing the best he could as an individual. Today a majority of local producers sell through a big co-operative and get a neat margin for their trouble.

At that time a warehousing system to take care of eggs was not even remotely being considered. Today the necessity of properly handling our ever increasing production is automatically forcing that problem forward for a solution. It now seems merely a matter of a little more time until eggs will be graded and prepared for market right here at home.

A few years ago one of our local poultry growers sold his land here at a very nominal price and went to California in one of the big poultry producing districts there where to get land he had to pay $500 an acre for it. He did not want to go to California. What he went for was to get into a district where volume of production insured a market. That move was made before we had secured marketing facilities. He was acquainted with California's possibilities in egg production and said before he left here that this district was better as a producing district than California.

When the day comes that this section realizes half of its possibilities as a poultry producing center cash income of growers will be vastly increased, land will be enhanced in value, and by achieving success, other poultry producers in areas where marketing facilities are lacking will be attracted to the district.

The old saying that nothing succeeds like success is true. Poultry production here is expanding at a rate that is really remarkable. It is destined to continue its expansion at an even more rapid rate.

Mr. Gignoux stated that the total annual combined egg production of Oregon, California, Washington and Idaho will last New York City just eight days!

Opportunity knocks at our door!

NICK SINNOTT PRAISED RECORD STEERING BILLS
 Congressman From This District Gets Action in House on 79 Measures.

Praise for the way N. J. Sinnott, congressman from this district, has steered bills of his committee on public lands through the house is made in the following which was published by the Portland Oregonian from its Washington, D. C. news bureau: Committee chairmen in the house who vie with one another in the effort to clear the legislative calendar of bills which have been reported favorably from their committees, are regarding with respect and no little envy the records established at this session by Representative Nicholas J. Sinnott of The Dalles, member from the second Oregon district.

"Nick," as his colleagues know him, is the capable chairman of the house committee on public lands. That the description is no idle flattery is best attested by the fact that out of 80 bills favorably reported by that committee at this session, 79 have passed the house of representatives and 45 of those have passed both houses and been signed by President Coolidge. The remainder are still awaiting action on the senate calendar.

In addition to this imposing showing, the house public lands committee has favorably reported 34 bills already passed by the senate and all of these have gone through the lower chamber to become laws.

In actually steering legislation through the house, it is generally admitted that the silver thatched sage from The Dalles has no peer. This rare ability can be attributed to his knowledge of house rules, which he seems to know forward and backward. The chairman of a committee is charged with the advancement of bills reported by his committee, and "Nick" uses his parliamentary skill to best advantage in cleaning up his slate. No better instance of this can be cited than the passage of the Oregon and California tax refund bill, which might have evoked vigorous opposition had it been less skillfully handled.

GOVERNOR URGES CAUTION ON PART OF PEACE OFFICERS

Taking of Life in Process of Making Arrests Is Deplored By Executive.

A request of all peace officers of the state that the greatest caution be observed to prevent loss of life when arrests of lawbreakers are being made has just been made in a statement issued by Walter M. Pierce, governor. The statement of the chief executive of the state was as follows:

I know full well that peace officers in the state have been aggravated of late by the boldness of lawbreakers, their refusal to submit to arrest and the general defiance of the law manifested. Nevertheless, recent attempts to arrest law violators, have resulted, unfortunately, in the killing of human beings, which is always to be deplored.

Section 1760, Oregon Laws, provides: "If, after notice of intention to arrest the defendant, he either flee or forcibly resist, the officer may use all necessary and proper means to effect the arrest."

It has been held in the case of Lander vs. Miles, 3 Or. 34, that "if a gun upon a person, in order to secure his arrest, is justifiable only where it is necessary. It is not justifiable where the arrest can be secured by less dangerous means."

Your attention is also called to Sections 1908 and 1909 Oregon Laws, which contain the law showing when a public officer is justified in killing.

In the case of State vs. Doherty, 52 Or. 591, it was held: "A threatened injury, to warrant a homicide in self-defense, must involve imminent peril to life or limb; fear of a slight injury or a mere assault not felonious furnishing no excuse, but if, considering the relative age and strength of the parties or the ferocity of the attack, the intended beating is of such character as to endanger life or limb, it will be felonious, and the assaulted person may kill if necessary to preserve his own life or protect himself from such beating."

I therefore, ask you, as peace officers of the state, to use extreme caution to see that the full intent of the law governing arrests, as interpreted by our courts, be carried out in spirit and fact. I am extremely anxious, as governor, to see every law enforced, including the Eighteenth amendment; but it is always a source of regret when a life is taken by a peace officer. I therefore earnestly request that the greatest caution be observed.

CONVERSION PERIOD EXTENDED ON INSURANCE

Instructions have just been received by the Portland office of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau authorizing reinstatement of war-time insurance by ex-service men until July 2, 1927, according to an announcement made by Kenneth L. Cooper, regional manager of the bureau. July 2, 1926, had been set by congress as the time limit for both reinstatement and conversion of war risk insurance but the new order extends the time one year.

An added feature in this connection is the privilege of taking out a five-year level premium term policy at a low rate prior to the above date which may later be converted into one of the six forms of permanent life and endowment government policies. This gives the ex-service man until July 2, 1927 to secure the low rate five year policy.

The American Legion advocated this legislation on the grounds that many war veterans have not yet adjusted their economic affairs to such an extent that they can afford at this time to carry one of the government's permanent insurance policies.

Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Horning and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. May of Weston, returned Tuesday from a fishing and vacation trip on Deschutes river and at East lake. They report having secured a good catch of fish. Mr. and Mrs. May have gone to Wyoming to visit relatives and they will go through Yellowstone park on the trip. Mrs. May and Mrs. Horning have been friends since girlhood days.
