Great Metropolis Has Seen Many Reverses

London existed as a town before the Romans licked it into shape behind the great wall that still can be traced, if tradition may be accepted. The Thames was unconfined and spread sluggishly among the reeds; the tide came up, forcing it to form backwaters and inundating the wide tracts of marshes. A thousand years after the Romans left, the houses, thatched with reeds, still were overlooked by woods and thickets, inhabited by deer and wild boars and the swamps were alive with bittern and duck. All the time London was growing, but on no settled plan. The process of development was continually interrupted, yet after each check it went on again. Bonfire destroyed it; the Danes wiped it out; Alfred the Great rebuilt it and within a century it was burned to the ground. Thereafter, fire and pestilence swept over it at frequent intervals, but it emerged stronger from every trial. London refused to be removed from the map, and its persistence was a visible expression of the determination of its people and a vindication of its position as a world mart.—Van-couver Province.

KIN OF ARGONAUTS FOUND IN CAUCASUS

American Woman Visits Lost Nation in Russia.

Welchville, Maine.—That the gorges of the Russian Caucasus hide a "lost nation" which claims descent from Jason, wears chain armor like the ancients and still performs sacrifices and worship trees, is the strange tale brought back to America by Mrs. Karl Rankin, who has just returned from five years as a Near East relief worker in Armenia.

Mrs. Rankin, a native of Welchville, is back in her old home on her honeymoon. It was as Miss Pauline Jordan that she spent five years in Armenia, after two years of study with Madame Curie in Paris. On her arrival in New York she married Karl Rankin, an other returned Near East relief worker. Her family were pioneers in Maine, coming here in 1640.

Mrs. Rankin's story of her visit to the "lost nation" of the Saventians, as told to an interviewer here, is as follows:

"I was stationed at Alexandropol, in Russian Armenia, where 15,000 refugee orphans are being educated by the Near East relief. I found that a group of these children were of Saventian race, and it became necessary for somebody to visit their mysterious mountain homeland in an effort to trace their relatives and it possible to repatriate the children in homes among their own people.

"Perhaps it was a foolhardy and venturesome trip for a woman, but I still feel the thrill of having accomplished it. I was told in Tiflis that I would not come back alive, but my mission was important.

"From the railroad I traveled three days on horseback to a village where I obtained local guides to accompany me through the mountains. For five days our horses climbed steadily, 12 hours a day. The trails often lay along the edge of terrific chasms, where a misstep meant death. Then we began to encounter scattered cottages and tiny hamlets. It was noticeable that my Georgian guides had a terror of the natives, for they would often mumble to themselves in Russian, 'A dark people! A dark people!'

"The country is accessible through a labyrinth of mountain passes for only a few weeks each year. I was the first American woman who had ever visited it. This people may truly be called a lost nation, because it is akin to no other people on earth to-day. Even the flora of their land seems strange. The natives are white, with fair skins and blue eyes, and they talk a language unknown outside their boundaries.

"Their Religion Different. Though they call themselves Christians, their religion is different from any other sect. They still perform sacrifices and there are remnants of ancient tree worship in their rites. Russian scholars say that these people are the descendants of Jason and the Argonauts. One of their prized relics is an anchor which they claim came from Jason's ship. It is preserved in a temple on the slopes of that great mountain upon which Prometheus is said to have been bound.

"During our trip we were compelled to seek nightly refuge in the homes of the people. They live in wooden huts of two stories, the lower floor sheltering their animals, while the upper floor is a single huge room where the whole family lives and sleeps. Their food consists mainly of hatch-quail, an odd mixture of corn meal and goat's milk cheese.

"My mission among the Saventians was entirely successful. After a few days, they were no longer suspicious of me, and within a week they were quite friendly. They were tremendously impressed to find that Americans were caring for a group of refugee children belonging to their tribe, and they promised to send their head men to our orphanage headquarters to select the first unit of children for repatriation. It is quite likely that the American work for these children will result in breaking down the isolation of this people and bringing them back again into a world usefulness.

Farmer Builds Home in Indian Graveyard

Nashville, Tenn.—Jonathan Dennis, farmer, who lives five miles from the center of Nashville, has discovered that he built his home in the midst of an Indian graveyard, with human skeletons surrounding his house.

While digging in his front lawn to plant some flowers, Dennis penetrated an Indian grave. The burial site covers about two acres and is an Indian mound. John Trotwood Moore, state librarian and archivist, who investigated the find, will seek the aid of the Smithsonian Institution in mapping the mound for further discoveries.

Several of the graves were investigated. One of the skeletons measured six feet, nine and a half inches. In the same grave was another skeleton, supposed to be the wife of the warrior, and between the two, the bones of a child.

BREST-LITOVSK MAY BE RECONSTRUCTED

American Funds Offered to Rebuild Polish City.

Washington.—American funds have been offered for the restoration of another war-ravaged European city—Brest-Litovsk, Poland, according to a news report from Warsaw.

Brest-Litovsk, which is famous for the separate treaty which representatives of Soviet Russia and Germany signed there, today consists of a fine railroad station and practically nothing more. Buildings which housed 50,000 people were laid waste and the large refugee population lives principally in caves and huts.

"Before the war Brest-Litovsk was one of Russia's most important trading centers and fortresses on her eastern borders," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington.

Center of Communication Web. "Complete restoration of Brest-Litovsk would mean recreating a city busy with buying, selling, carrying and transferring the products of a large agricultural region. Railways from Odessa, Kiev, Moscow, Warsaw, Vilna and East Prussia intersect at the lone some new railroad station. But Brest-Litovsk is more than a rail center. It lies upon the inland waterway from the Baltic to the Black sea.

A canal east of the city connects the Mukhovets river and the Pripiet river, which are, respectively, fingertips of waterway arms reaching from the north and south toward each other. Thus the city is served by a well-nigh perfect system of communication, extending in all directions.

"Brest-Litovsk lies 100 miles east of Warsaw. Normally half its population was of Jewish blood, and it long has been a Jewish stronghold. It never developed an industry, but depended instead upon commerce. During the Sixteenth century the synagogue of the city was regarded as the first in Europe.

"Grains, hides, soap, wheat and timber were the staples of its extensive trade. The lumber in which it dealt was floated in great rafts down to Danzig. Flax, some of which went to Ireland and Belgium to make Irish and Flemish linen, was extensively grown in the country surrounding the town and formed another important article of its trade.

"The familiar geographic reason for the existence of a town, namely two rivers meeting, gives Brest-Litovsk its excuse for being. The navigable Bug and Mukhovets rivers join and at the point of confluence once stood the city fortress. Older fortifications were east of the city and covered four square miles. The defenses were the pride of Russia.

"But the World war showed what history had been reporting for years; that Brest-Litovsk was far from invulnerable. It was first mentioned in ancient documents on the occasion of its capture by a Polish monarch in 1020. Next Casimir the Just of Poland built a tight castle. Princes of Galicia, Volhynia, Lithuania, grand masters of the Teutonic Knights, Tatar chieftains and kings of Poland held and stormed the city in turns, and going out from it gathered spoil from the countryside.

Climax of Russian Tragedy. "All of Brest-Litovsk history, however, records no such high moment as it experienced late in 1917. Things looked black for the allies, Russia, which had been holding Germany on the east, had collapsed internally under the pressure of war. Kerensky, who still espoused the allied cause, was soon displaced by the Soviet regime. Germany had driven deep into Russian territory. With this setting the last act of the Russian tragedy took place in Brest-Litovsk, which by that time had degenerated into a war camp and nothing more.

"At the headquarters of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, Soviet representatives signed a separate peace with Germany which put the entire burden of carrying on the war on England, France, the United States, Italy and their allies."

Sparrow Finds a Way to Get Meal on Auto

Berkeley, Calif.—The irrepressible English sparrow has learned to make the automobile contribute to its bill of fare.

According to ornithologists' observations in such widely separated regions as Illinois and California the resourceful birds have been making a practice of collecting toasted grasshoppers and other insects that have become wedged in the fronts of automobile radiators. In central California large numbers of sparrows were observed "working" the front of car after car parked along the streets, says H. S. Swarth of the department of zoology of the University of California.

In spite of concerted drives to head it off, the indomitable sparrow's march across the continent has proceeded unimpeded and the rowdy raggamuffin has ingeniously turned to its own advantage the machine that by eliminating the horse from the streets, had deprived him of an important source of food.

Handful of Grain Dust Turns Over Auto Engine

Washington.—Grain dust taken from a grain elevator has been found to have sufficient explosive power to run an automobile engine.

Department of Agriculture chemists who conducted tests announced that, while the engine did not make any prolonged, continuous run, enough power was developed with the dust to turn it over many times. A hand system of feeding the dust through a tube to the intake valve was used.

The experimenters said the study gave "encouraging results which indicated the possibilities of designing an engine to use grain dust as the source of fuel."

"Mother of States"

This name is applied to Virginia because so many states have been carved from her original territory. At the time of the settlement of Jamestown the name Virginia was applied to all that part of North America lying between the thirty-fourth and forty-fifth degrees of latitude, extending from coast to coast. This region now comprises the greater part of the United States. When Sir Frances Drake circumnavigated the globe he stopped on the coast of California which he spoke of as "the back of Virginia." Seven states have been carved from the territory claimed by Virginia at the time of the Revolution—Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Kentucky and West Virginia.

Dickens Not Fine in Delineation of Women

Dickens had no theories about women as a sex; he had no theories about mankind. He did not try to account for his women characters by reliance on a formula. They interested him as individuals, and the most successful of his women characters are those with some heavily underlined peculiarity which enabled him to keep up an incessant excitement about them, is the comment of a writer in the Westminster Gazette.

Mrs. Nickleby and Sairey Gamp live vividly because Dickens' imagination was working at high pressure when he created them, and his excitement infects his readers. The women about whom he felt so intensely are human, and therefore credible; but Dickens never worked dispassionately or far enough away from his subject to make his women universal. In creating Miss Wardle he felt the pathos of the love-lorn spinster. But he had to make a jest of the elopement with Jingle, whose rascality alone saves the scene from complete reality. Dickens ran away from Miss Wardle's emotional tension because she was a good woman and for women of her type to give way to emotion was a little improper.

For with all his imagination, sympathy, and acute sensibility, Dickens could never persuade himself that women have the ordinary feelings and fallings of humanity.
