Helped Through Day

by Things of Beauty

He apologized for leaning across the man in the corner seat to look out of the railway carriage window.

"I never miss that little glimpse of the canal," he added. "It helps me through the day."

He sat back satisfied and for a few moments kept his eyes shut. He was going over the details of the quay-side and the warehouses and the barges with their brown sails and the men carrying piles of bricks. They "helped him through the day."

It is a fine thing to have some help of that kind. The more the better.

Everywhere there is beauty, if we only keep our eyes skinned to discover it.

Some of us find a garden where at all seasons there is something to rejoice us. Some get their help from a noble building. Some like to walk every day through a park and enjoy the trees in their changing aspects, different every week in the year.

Others draw their daily inspiration and encouragement from art, a picture, a reproduction, a piece of sculpture.

Or it may be that literature provides the needed help—verse treasured in the memory or the haunting beauty of exquisite prose.—Philadelphia Record.

Experiment in Cross

Breeding Is Success

A new animal, designed to combine the milk-giving abundance of the South with the hardness of the North, has been raised in the farm attached to Alaska college, at Fairbanks, Alaska.

This animal has been developed with Galloway cows as the mothers and yaks from the snowy fastnesses of Tibet as fathers. Their name as well as their breed has been crossed, and the have received the name of galloyaks.

The galloyak has inherited the long shaggy hair of his father, but the placidity of the mother has evidently been responsible for the reduction of the paternal hump. The animals are hardy, and are well adapted to the extreme cold of the North.

The value of the new animal is great. Its meat is of excellent flavor, and is extremely nourishing. Its hair has a high commercial value, and first quality leather can be made from its hide.

Monopoly Not Possible

The Columbia State offers this: "When the Hebrew minor prophet Joel wrote the lovely saying that Dryden hammered into an heroic line—'Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions'—he was probably—we haven't the Hebrew text before us—trying to round out what is known as a Hebrew 'parallelism,' saying one thing in two ways, rather than two things in a kind of formula. He was saying that everybody, with due illumination, would dream dreams and see visions, as Job dreamed and saw them in the dead watches of the night. Neither old nor young has a monopoly of dream and vision."

World's Largest "Port"

The Port of New York is a district, created by compact or treaty, between the states of New York and New Jersey and comprising the territory within a line drawn from Port Chester, across through White Plains, over to Yonkers, across the Hudson river to Piermont down on the New Jersey side, passing beside Passaic and Paterson and taking in the industrial territory west of and including Hoboken, Jersey City, Newark, all the way to South Amboy, across again to the New York side, taking in the complete area of the city of New York. The population of the port district is approximately 9,000,000.

Famous Painting

The painting of "The Last Supper" by Leonardo da Vinci is recognized as one of the world's masterpieces. It was originally painted by order of the duke of Milan on the walls of the Dominican convent of the Madonna del Grazie. The picture is now in a state of decay, but several very fine copies have been made. One of them, at the Royal academy in London, is considered worthily representative of the original. The "Mona Lisa" of the same painter, now in the Louvre, is also rated among the greatest paintings.

Making Safes Safer

A new safe that has an almost human power of giving warning should any attempt be made to rob it has been invented. Should burglars attempt to break it open by the usual methods of using heat, the material of which the safe is built gives off a series of loud reports.

The new material is in the form of plates, one inch thick, applied inside the safe. Up to the present no method has been found for melting, breaking or destroying the material.

HERMISTON LOCALS

Mrs. Frank Helms of Echo was in town the first of the week.

Mrs. F. B. Knight of Irrigon was here shopping Monday.

F. B. Stuart, F. A. Baker and D. Shumway of Stanfield were here the first of the week.

J. M. Burnett, signal man for the O. W. R. & N., has rented the house at Ridgeway and Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Hurly have the house on the highway formerly occupied by A. H. Norton.

James McKittrick of Spokane is here this week on business connected with Federal bank loans in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. George Slagle of Pilot Rock were guests Wednesday night of Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Kingsley. Mrs. Slagle and Mrs. Kingsley went to school together as girls and have been lifelong friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fishbeck of Montana, who have been visiting Mrs. C. C. Durfee, left Monday morning for Los Angeles. They are driving and will stop at San Francisco and Sacramento for brief visits.

Mrs. W. T. Lambert, a former resident of the project, was the guest of friends here Saturday. Mrs. Lambert will leave for New York shortly after the holidays, making a number of visits with friends and relatives en route. At New York she will take passage for Buenos Aires where she will pay an extended visit to her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Shotwell.

H. M. SCHILLING RETURNS FROM POST IN MONTANA

H. M. Schilling, former project manager here, who has been stationed at Ballantine, Montana, for over a year, returned the first of the week to Hermiston, where his family has been settled since early fall. Mr. Schilling has resigned from the government service, but has made no plans for the immediate future.

"Montana has had a good year and the people are much pleased with the returns from their crops," said Mr. Schilling. He also stated that the thermometer showed 22 below when he left that part of the country.

Caruso's Loyalty to His Queen Pathetic

Caruso had one old friend to whom he was devoted and whom he worshiped from afar with a pathetic sort of adoration. This was Maria Sophia of Bourbon, the former queen of Naples. She had been his benefactress in the early days of his career.

Even though her reign was over and she lived in exile in France, she was still his queen, the sovereign of his native city. He never failed to visit her when he went abroad, and on his last visit she presented him with a scarf-pin, a medal carved with the head of a Madonna encircled with rubies.

Through her secretary, Signor Barcelona, Caruso received regular reports of her, and each month he wrote his queen a beautiful and ceremonious letter, addressing her with all the formality due her former rank, to which she clung pathetically even in her old age. The exile of this venerable queen was one of the things he would brood over with tears in his eyes, but he would never discuss her with anyone. To him she was the sacred emblem of royalty.—Dorothy Caruso, in the Saturday Evening Post.

Chair Too Valuable to Consign to Attic

The guest sat down in a comfortable-looking rocking chair, but immediately his feet flew up in the air. "Take another chair, take this one," urged his hostess. "That chair is very uncomfortable."

"Why in the world do you keep that chair in this room?" growled Friend Husband. "No one can sit in it with ease. Why don't you put it in the attic?"

"Because no one can sit in it with ease," replied Friend Wife. "You've given the reason yourself. It's for those guests, callers, whom I don't wish to be at ease. I engineer it so they'll sit there and their calls are much shortened thereby. If anyone I like happens to get into that chair, it is an easy matter for me to insist that he or she change for a comfortable chair. Oh, my, yes, that uncomfortable chair has saved me many hours of boring talk."—Springfield Union.

Freedom Brings Light

There is only one cure for evils which newly acquired freedom produces, and that cure is freedom. The blaze of truth and liberty may at first dazzle and bewilder nations which have become half-blind in the house of bondage. But let them gaze on, and they will soon be able to bear it. In a few years men learn to reason, and the extreme violence of opinions subsides. The scattered elements of truth cease to contend and begin to coalesce. And at length a system of justice and order is educed out of the chaos.—Macaulay.

Originated in Error

An explanation of the origin of the word "hoodlum" has been given in the following tale: Out in San Francisco a great many years ago there was a man named Muldoon, who was the leader of a band of boy ruffians. A reporter who had been assigned to a story of this gang attempted to coin a name for them and transposed the name Muldoon, calling the gang hoodlums. The typesetter mistook the letter "n" for "h" and made the word "hoodlum." It passed the proof-reader and became a recognized word.

Ancient Wedding Gowns

Most of the Plantagenet and Tudor queens were married in that vivid hue which is still popular in parts of Brittany, where the bride is usually dressed in crimson brocade. It was Mary Stuart who first changed the color of the bridal garments. At her marriage with Francis II of France in 1558, which took place not before the altar but before the great doors of Notre Dame, she was gowned in white brocade, with a train of pale blue Persian velvet six yards in length.

Seemed Too Much for One

A little girl was travelling in a street car with her mother, a woman of very slight build.

Presently an extremely stout woman boarded the car, and sat down opposite the little girl.

The car started off with a jerk, and the little child contemplated the woman opposite her for some minutes, then, turning to her mother, inquired in a loud voice:

"Mother, is that all one lady?"

Montana Rancher Named Wheat King.

Chicago.—E. E. Edson-Smith, a 55-year-old Corvallis, Mont., farmer, is the new wheat king of North America. Competing against the best wheat producers of the United States and Canada at the International Livestock exposition, Smith wrested the prize title from the Canadian Herman Trelle of the Peace River district of Alberta, Canada. It was only the third time in 17 years of competition that Uncle Sam's rural sons have been able to win the huge cup, emblematic of the championship.

Another Burbank

A little four-year-old girl had been playing with a boy of the same age when she spied a dead bird lying in a neighbor's backyard and persuaded the boy to get it. They immediately began examining it, but wished to know something about it, so a member of the little girl's family was called and several questions were answered. Finally the little girl, with a puzzled look on her face, turned and asked: "If you planted it, would it grow into a bird?"
