"To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

Was it not Solomon who made the statement that there is nothing new under the sun? What previous age ever had a flying Lindbergh to be a messenger of good will between nations.

Sometimes it is one thing to look and quite another to see. The wisdom of this remark can be verified by a number of local poultry growers. They saw, and by reason of having seen, they are expecting egg production to go up.

"If I did n't have so much to do—" is the way a lot of us who think we are busy start out with our excuses. There is food for thought in the reports from Portland about how the work of cleaning snow from the public streets was divided up into shifts so that as many needy men as possible might have an opportunity to make a little money. Several thousand were so employed. Just how fortunate are those of us who have more work to do than we think can be done.

With Cold Springs reservoir more than half full of water and heaps and heaps of snow in the hills to make a big spring runoff; with flocks of chickens producing for patient students of egg production and herds of dairy cows producing butterfat for their owners; with a sizeable number of newcomers moving into our midst with the idea of general farming, the bugaboo of slower business in a year of general elections has no meaning for this young Hermiston country. The future is looking up.

Someone told us the other day that one fraternal organization in Los Angeles has a clerical and executive force of six persons whose sole business is to render aid of one kind or another to visiting members of the fraternity who are embarrassed because of sickness, lack of funds etc. Here in the Hermiston country we have not many rich folks, but on the other hand, we are very fortunate in having practically no destitute families. The moral is: It is nearly always a wise thing for a poor man to stay in a country where the stories about wealth are less and the chances of making a living are better than they happen to be right now, or at nearly any other time, in the winter playground country of the rich.

Said a representative citizen to us the other day: "If a stranger were to drop into town and try to get his bearings as to the nationality here by looking at the flag over the school house he probably would think the pirates had taken the town and would move on as fast as possible. The flag is blackened, frayed and has holes in it. It does not look like an American flag." The American flag is very beautiful and has too precious a value to all of us to be submitted to such indignities. It should be properly cared for and its beauty of color and line preserved, or else it should not be flown. And since when did it become necessary not to fly it because it can not be given the slight care necessary to preserve it?

INTEREST IN GROUP SALES SHOWN BY WOOL GROWERS

State Association Features Talks on Co-operative Selling.

Local Man Says.

More sentiment in the ranks of wool growers of the eastern part of the state favorable to the co-operative marketing of wool was displayed at this year's convention of the Oregon Wool Growers association at Pendleton than ever before, according to the impressions brought home by New Madden, local sheep man who attended all the sessions.

R. A. Ward, manager of the Pacific Wool Growers co-operative, was accorded excellent reception at the hands of the convention, Mr. Madden stated, and the tenor of speeches and private conversations on the part of producers indicated that the big wool growers of the eastern part of the state are beginning to take co-operative selling of clips more seriously.

Based on contracts being offered by speculative forces in the wool business, and the loss of sheep and wool production in Australia, together with short supplies in the hands of the mills, prospects for wool prices this year are better than last year, Mr. Madden stated.

Demonstrations on cutting lamb carcasses to the best advantage for retail marketing were given by a specialist before the convention. Sheep men are spending some money in educational work to stimulate the per capita consumption of lamb. Production and consumption are about balanced at present, Mr. Madden said, with the result that some apprehension is felt by producers over the possibility of the price of lambs sagging and so throwing the industry on an unprofitable basis of production.

The officers who have served for two or three years were re-elected. K. G. Warner of Pilot Rock is president of the association.

Ed Neal, Butter creek sheep man, also attended the convention from here.

PHIPPS HAVE EXCITING TRIP ON THEIR WAY HOME

Word received from Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Phipps, who left here Tuesday morning at 9 to drive to their home in Salem, states that they got home at 9 P. M. of the same day. Crossing to the Washington side at Hood River, they drove for long distances through a one-way road cut in deep drifts. Aside from the excitement of the hazardous driving, the Phipps car figured in two minor accidents, one between Cascade Locks and Hood River where they were struck by a car coming toward them, and the other on the North Bank highway, a car sliding into Mr. Phipps' car from the rear. Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Phipps was hurt and the car was only slightly damaged.

Restaurant Seen as Divorce-Court Ally

In an address before the National Restaurant association Mrs. Christine Frederick said that if the way to a man's heart is through his stomach it follows that whoever caters most closely to his appetite will have a chief hold on his affections—and consequently, as most women hate to cook, the restaurant is an ally of the divorce court.

Wives will hold the affection of their husbands by good cooking, but they have ceased to be cooks and become tinsmiths.

Yes, indeed, it discourages a man to come home and find that he is expected to eat a lot of cold stuff from the delicatessen shop instead of good hot roast beef with the fixings, and thus is discontent started in a nice happy home—and court actions follow.—Brooklyn Standard Union.

African Romance

There is a strange romance connected with the discovery of diamond deposits at the mouth of the Orange river. The field was discovered by the late F. C. Cornell, traveler, explorer and big game shot.

Although his discovery was not apparently known in South Africa, it now transpires that as far back as 1921 Mr. Cornell, when on a visit to London, confided to a friend that he had come upon the most extraordinary wealth of diamonds, and pointed out in the strictest confidence to the position on the map.

One of the objects of his journey to Europe was to arrange for the marketing of the stones. He had wealth almost beyond the imagination of avarice within his reach when he was killed by a motor accident at the Marble arch in London in March, 1921.

All He Wanted

With high hopes the commercial traveler called on a tradesman. They had never done business before, but a friend had supplied the introduction.

"May I show you my samples?" asked the traveler.
"Certainly," answered the merchant, and watched his visitor produce a surprisingly large selection of various articles from an insignificant bag. The traveler pointed out their merits and then waited.

"Well, there's only one thing I want," said the dealer.

"Yes, sir," he cried, "and what is that?"

"I want to see how you're going to get all those samples back into that bag," was the astounding answer.

"Pearl Shower" Only Eggs

A reported "shower of pearls" near Secunderabad, India, recently, caused a rush to the spot where they fell. Following a heavy rainstorm a native discovered the ground covered with white globules, ranging in size from that of a nut to a mustard seed. Thousands flocked to the field in autos, on bicycles and on foot, and gathered the "pearls" by the handful. Police authorities investigated and found that the "pearls" were eggs resembling the genuine article. Many who had collected the eggs are still keeping them, refusing to believe that they are not pearls. The man who discovered them sent a bagful to the authorities at Hyderabad, and demanded payment for the "pearls."

And It Really Seemed Such a Nice Scandal

A conversation between two women, one of whom was hard of hearing, interested the passengers of a Glenwood avenue car.

"I saw her on a street downtown with a man."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, and it was after ten o'clock, too."

"The very idea."

"I never suspected her of flirting before."

"No, nor me, either."

"But you never can tell."

"Ain't it the truth?"

"It is that."

"Do you know her husband?"

"No, I ain't never seen him close."

"Well, he is a big, fat man."

"Does he wear a brown suit?"

"Yes."

"Glasses?"

"Yes."

"Smoke a pipe?"

"Uh, huh!"

There was deepest disappointment in the woman's voice as she exclaimed:

"Fiddlesticks! Then it was only her husband after all."—Youngstown Telegram.

Why British Clothiers Seldom Amass Money

Father may think he wears his clothes a long time, but they wear 'em longer in Britain. A Stamford septuagenarian each morning dons a coat that was worn by his father after his grandfather had used it for a couple of decades. It still has the original buttons and, according to Tibbits, looks good for another 20 years on top of its 100.

Of four other veterans in a rural parish, one is wearing a fifty-year-old suit, another continues to brush an overcoat he has worn for 30 winters. The third says his twenty-five-year-old top coat is not very shabby, and the fourth says he didn't really begin to like his waistcoat until he had worn it for 40 social seasons.

Oh, yes. There is one woman, the wife of a farmhand, who admits she bought her best costume 15 years ago and still wears it to meeting.

Physicians for the Well

Physicians were originally trained to treat the sick. Until recently, they have not had a primary interest in the well. It is now increasingly easy to find a physician who is interested in his patient, who is desirous of keeping him well, who is competent to carry out a thorough examination, and who is able and willing to give constructive hygienic advice. More and more the medical profession is realizing that there is a tremendous field for medical service in this private practice of preventive medicine. Most individuals can with advantage be advised how to work wisely, how to play safely, how to live happier lives in a hygienically constructive manner, with the logical sequence of a fuller life with greater duration—a longer life and a merrier one.—Dr. Donald B. Armstrong in the North American Review.

Rather Spoiled Effect

Johnnie is the son of a well-known business man who lives in Logan. Sunday afternoon Johnnie's parents had company for dinner. Jack, as Johnnie is sometimes called, is almost six years old. Now Johnnie's parents, true to nature, are proud of their son and his ability. At the dinner table the little boy was asked to say grace. In a quiet manner Johnnie complied with the request. With bowed head he said the prayer perfectly. When he had finished his aunt—very religiously inclined—praised him. "John, that was fine," she said. "You didn't make even one little mistake." With a wild gesture of his arm, Johnnie remarked: "And I said the whole darn thing, too."—Philadelphia Record.

Natural Washub

There is a hot spring known as "Handkerchief Pool" located in the Black Sand basin at Old Faithful Geyser formation. The spring is a round pool with a deep hole in the center, from which bubbles are constantly arising. A handkerchief placed in this pool will be drawn under by the action of the water and several minutes later will be forced upward by the bubbles. It comes out clean. The pool has a circular current, which works around in circles, causing this peculiar phenomenon. The pool has many amusing legends connected with it and is one of the most widely visited places in Yellowstone park.

Truth Too Startling

Were writers of fiction to put incidents from real life into their works, most of the stories would be so fantastic that they would not be believed, declares Rita Weiman, well-known author, in an article in Liberty. "Truth is too strange for fiction!" the writer asserts. "The adventures of human experience are almost invariably too amazing, too shocking, too horrible, too apparently exaggerated to be transcribed exactly as they meet us in sharp black type on any printed page but that of a newspaper, they would appear absurd, the wildest stretch of the imagination."

It Can't Be Spoiled

Palm Beach, in spite of the funny people who go there, is the loveliest resort in the western world.—Woman's Home Companion.

Visitors Treated to "Relay" Dinner Party

George Arliss in his reminiscences, "Up the Years From Bloomsbury," describes a novel farewell dinner party given to him and Mrs. Arliss in Boston at the end of the run of "Disraeli."

"As there was not time to pay leisurely farewell visits to all of our friends, the latter arranged for a Sunday dinner to be partaken of in five or six separate and distinct establishments.

"We were ignorant of the conspiracy until after the soup had been served at the first house to which we were invited. We were much surprised when, after soup, our hostess got up and the whole party of eight wished us good-by. We were bundled into a waiting limousine and driven to house No. 2, where we arrived in time for the second course. Fish having been consumed we were whizzed off to house No. 3, and so on until the sixth house, where coffee was served and all the parties from the other houses were assembled."

Seven German States Within Small Radius

While it is generally known that some of the German states are of Lilliputian size, few persons are aware that it is quite possible to visit seven of them, including two former kingdoms, two duchies and three principalities, in an easy walk of four and a half hours.

A good walker, starting from Steinbach, in Bavaria, will arrive in half an hour at Lichtenhanne, which is situated in Saxe-Meiningen. Thence the road proceeds in one and a half hours to Rauschengesees (Reuss, Elder Branch) after which in a few minutes Gleina, in Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, is reached.

Half an hour's walk brings the pedestrian to Altenegesees (Reuss, Younger Branch). An hour further on lies Drognitz, on Prussian soil, and the last stage is another hour's stroll, finishing up at Saultath, Saxe-Altenburg.

Areas Awaiting Settlers

There are no parts of the United States which can be designated as "unexplored," but there are many sections where there are considerable stretches of territory of which little or nothing is known. In the lake country near the Canadian border there is a large area about which little is known, while Yuma and Pima counties and a portion of Maricopa county, Ariz., are yet to be thoroughly explored. A short time ago San Juan county, in southwestern Utah, near Chaco Canyon national monument, was included among these untrampled areas. A large part of Nevada, which is more than twice as large as Pennsylvania, is almost devoid of human life, particularly the central and southern portions of the state. Fewer than 80,000 people live in the whole state. One has still to travel by compass in parts of northern Michigan and Wisconsin.

Taken at His Word

"Good-by," he said brokenly, and his frame shook with emotion. "Remember, dear, that even if I can't win your love I shall always be your devoted friend."
The girl blushed.
"And," continued the heart-broken youth, "if ever I can be of service to you, you have only to command me, I leave for Egypt tonight."
"I am awfully sorry," remarked the girl, "to have been the cause of your leaving home but since you are so kind, please mail this letter for me on your way to the boat."

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE UNDER EXECUTION
