Scottish Capital Has Long Been Royal City

Edinburgh is rightly proud of its long history, but it would be difficult to say exactly when that history began. The castle rock doubtless commanded itself as a desirable defensive position to the early Britons, and one may enter upon a wide field of conjecture as to why they gave it its first name of Myngd Agned; signifying the "painted mound," in what must have been a dim and misty past even to the Gaels, who later Christened it Dunedin.

The oldest form of its present name was Edwinesburgh, as it is recorded in the foundation charter of Holyrood in 1128, and authentic history prior to that date is lacking, according to a writer in the Weekly Scotsman. According to Simeon of Durham the buildings on the hill in the Ninth century, apart from the castle, constituted only a small village; and it was not till 1068 when, on the death of Malcolm Ceanmor, it became the place of refuge of Queen Margaret that Edinburgh emerged from obscurity.

In succeeding centuries its strategic position and its royal associations increased its importance, and David I referred to it as "meo burgo de Edwinesburgh," but it was in 1329 that it was formally constituted a royal burgh by a charter of Robert the Bruce.

Woman's Beauty Seen as Great Influence

It is woman's business to be beautiful. Her outward beauty is the token and symbol of all that makes life worth living; and, if her inner self should belie her exterior, she fills men with cynicism, renders them fierce and brutal and drives them to despair.

The beauty of woman is a tremendously powerful influence, and, like all great forces, it may serve base or noble purposes. The mischief is that this great influence is given to young women at an age when they cannot understand its power and gravity of the responsibility that goes with it.

Woman in general will always expose as much of herself as the taste of men will permit her to do. There is no harm in this. But beware lest you make yourself a martyr in the sacred cause of woman's freedom. . . . Immodesty consists in going a little beyond the custom. If it is customary to expose three inches do not expose six. If it is customary to expose your shoulder blades do not expose the small of your back.—From "Character and the Conduct of Life," by Prof. William McDougall.

Cold Light

When the current of a Ruhmkort induction coil is passed through a glass tube in a vacuum the tube glows with a brilliant light. This is the light of the future. Hitherto it has not been possible to produce light without producing heat. But recently an improved form of the Geissler tube has been produced which has it is claimed, overcome this difficulty. The light of the future will glow through long transparent tubes of all sizes and colors, able to take the most varied directions and to run horizontally vertically or obliquely, forming stars, rosettes, spirals, arabesques, etc.

The tubes radiate a diffused glow from end to end. The effect is a splendid, intense lunar light.

Dust Fades the Sky

The sky is losing its blue color in some parts of the world, according to Sir Napier Shaw, an English meteorologist, due, he believes, to the presence of chemical or moisture particles forming as a result of some volcanic eruption. There is a marked effect on the climate in some areas, he declares. In 1912, the weather was unusually cold and rainy in many sections, and an eruption of Mount Katmai was accompanied by an average fall of temperature of three quarters of a degree. In 1903 and 1904, similar changes occurred with the appearance of a whitish sky.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Paragapher Akin to Ancient Court Jester

This republican counterpart of the king's jester is the newspaper paragapher and paragapher-cartoonist. His development, and the privileged character of his position in our system, constitute one of the most impressive curiosities of modern journalism, Albert Jay Nock writes, in Harper's Magazine.

No more exact parallel to the primitive institution could be devised. The paragapher has inherited all the jester's privileges, neither more nor fewer, and exactly the same set of expectations are put upon him.

The freer his speech to the sovereign lord, the closer and siverer his approach to the plain, natural truth of things, the more he is appreciated and applauded. The wider his experience of human nature and the closer his interpretations come to the risidual common sense of mankind, the more firmly, by common consent, he is fixed in his job. The more profound and subversive his implications, the stronger his position at the republican sovereign's court.

Moreover, there is no one to contest or to share his privileges; he is a unique figure in a unique function. If the prophet, lecturer, or so-called public servant undertook to assume his liberties and prerogatives he would at once come to grief by the avalanche of general disapproval.
