John Pace of Portland is in Hermiston to spend the Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Pace.

With the aid of a meat chopper kitchen waste can often be used as a good poultry food, by the backyard poultry keeper. It is best to balance the ration with grain and mash.

Mrs. C. C. Durfee, accompanied by her son Jarvis Durfee, left Hermiston on Monday for an extended holiday trip. They planned to be in Montana for Christmas and from there they will go to Los Angeles to spend New Years.

Walter Felthouse of Berkeley, California, is a guest at the W. W. Felthouse home for the Christmas holidays. He is a nephew of Mr. Felthouse and a student at Whitman college.

Margaret Felthouse was taken to St. Anthony's hospital in Pendleton early this week. Her illness was diagnosed as intestinal flu and it was thought for awhile that an operation might be necessary unless she began to improve. According to recent word she is getting along nicely.

L. Stewart, better known as "Dad," returned to Hermiston last week from Pendleton where he had been a patient at St. Anthony's hospital for a week. Mr. Stewart farms on the west side of the river.

M. B. Roberts of Vancouver, Washington, was a Hermiston visitor this week. Mr. Roberts has property interests here.

J. W. Clarke made a business trip to Lebanon, Oregon, this week.

James Todd has been confined to his home on account of sickness the past week.

W. F. Brown of Santa Barbara, Calif., visited Hermiston Sunday. Mr. Brown was one of the early settlers on the project.

John Pace, farmer of Stanfield, was in Hermiston Sunday.

Fred Lenz is building a new chicken house on his ranch east of town.

Roy Hutchinson is losing much sleep these nights, a new Kolster radio being the cause.

Do your shopping at home—the local stores have beautiful displays.

George Leibe is building a hog barn on his ranch in the Columbia district.

Jack Pace enjoyed a birthday party Sunday with several boy friends present. Jack was 10 years old.

Three Good Reasons for Study of Greek

There was once a rough and uneducated man who had made money and who entered his boy in a swell college preparatory school. The head master asked him if there was anything he was particularly desirous his son should be taught, and the uncultured one replied: "Yes, there is. I want him to take Greek."

"May I ask," inquired the head master, in considerable amazement, "why you are so insistent upon his pursuit of that particular subject?"

"Well," said the rude parent, "there are three reasons why I want him to learn Greek: First, because it's hard; second, because he don't want to; and, third, because it's no good anyway. If he learns it after all that, he'll show he's got some stuff in him."

Moral: This fable has morals enough to fill a book.—Edward C. Durfee in Scribner's Magazine.

Enormous Spiders

Two of the largest bird-eating spiders ever seen at the London zoo came from Brazil. Nearly a foot in expanse, with poison fangs three-quarters of an inch long, and huge hairy bodies, they are probably the most repulsive creatures imaginable. One of them is quite docile, but the other will unhesitatingly attack.

Its method is to rear itself on the hinder legs, holding the front pair in the air ready to grip the hand that seeks it and plunge its fangs into the flesh.

Another tactic is to brush its fur with its hind leg, causing stinging hairs to float around, and if these settle on the human skin the effects are very painful.

You want entertainment—not trouble. You want to hear programs instead of a service man explaining what's wrong with your radio. You want a set to work—and keep on working, week in and week out—year after year without attention.
