HOME POINTERS

A standard material, as serge, always gives better value for the money than a material of some new weave.

Dress has an influence on the wearer as well as on the observer. One loses self-respect when dressed in a ragged or soiled garment. An overdressed or inappropriately dressed woman is uncomfortable herself and wins the respect of others with difficulty. Good nature may be increased or decreased as the clothes worn are clean, comfortable and appropriate, or the reverse. Perhaps on first thought it may seem an exaggeration to say that neat clothing is a factor in virtue, but observation will prove that it is easier "to be good" when properly dressed.

The faded appearance of a blue garment may be counteracted by rinsing it in a strong solution. Other delicate colors may be dipped in a dye solution of the same color. Time is saved by having a bottle of various colored dye solutions at hand.

The colr in wash fabrics may be set by placing the material or garment in a strong hot solution of salt water and letting it stand until the water is cold.

An excellent paste for cleaning silverware is made by using one tablespoon of amonia, three of soft water. stir in enough whiting to make a thick paste. Rub this on the silverware with a soft cloth, let dry, then rub it off with a flannel, and polish with a chamois skin. Whiting is obtainable at any drug store.
