Tragedy and Comedy in Alchemists' Dreams

Tragedy in England, comedy in Germany ended the researches of alchemists for the means of turning baser metals into gold and silver. In England James Price claimed to have found a way of causing the conversion. He even demonstrated his experiment before a large group of celebrities, including King George III. When requested by the Royal academy, however, to exhibit his method to them, he showed a disinclination to do so. Finally, however, he was persuaded. When only three members of the academy arrived on the day appointed, Price swallowed a quantity of the strongest poison known at that time, and died.

A contemporary theologian, named Semler, in Germany, placed a so-called panacea, the Salt of Life, in a jar with a stone. He later found flakes of gold on the stone. He entered into a series of debates with famous chemists of the day, but failed to convince them that he had analyzed the substance and found it to be gold. They analyzed some and found it to be a metal called "Dutch Metal." Upon investigation it was found that a servant of Semler's placed the gold each day on the stone to please his master. In the servant's absence the wife purchased the cheaper Dutch metal and spent the remainder for brandy. Semler admitted his mistake and the matter was a standing joke for many years.—Detroit News.

Barred All Argument

Many years ago there lived a wise man named Ptah Hetep. He was regarded as an ancient philosopher long before Tutankhamen was born. Some of his sayings or maxims are reported in a roll of 18 columns of Egyptian writing of the Twenty-fifth century B. C., which is preserved in the Louvre, and in one of his letters to his son, Ptah Hetep says: "Do not argue with your superiors: it does not do any good. Do not argue with your equals: make a plain and courteous statement and content yourself with that. Do not argue with your inferiors: let them talk and they will make fools of themselves."

Some of It Available

Sonny Bush, five years old, had been galloping wildly around the back yard with two neighborhood boys playing racehorse. On a turn of the track on the concrete driveway his foot slipped. Steed and rider both went down in a heap. No casualties resulted except a badly barked shin. Sonny, red and hot, ran in to mother for consolation. Mother holds the tear-stained, flushed face up to hers. "Oh, sonny, how I wish I had your beautiful, clear skin." "All right, mamma, go out and get it. It's out there on the driveway."—Kansas City Star.

Flamingoes Are Queer

Among the peculiarities of the flamingo are the great length of its legs and the formation of its bill, which is large and bent downwards at the middle. It feeds on water weeds and small aquatic animals, and flies about in flocks, uttering a harsh cry like that of a goose.

The flamingo is distributed over the warmer regions of both hemispheres, occasionally being found as far north as the British isles and northern Germany.

"Evil Eye" Feared

In Italy especially the evil eye has been believed in and guarded against for centuries. It is known as "la jettatura," and many persons were and still are known as "jettatori," or possessors of the evil eye, who have the quality of injuring all on whom they look, even against their own will. Those who meet them cross their fingers or make the sign of the cross or touch some charm against the evil eye.
