THE ELEVENTH ARMISTICE

Next Monday the greater part of the world will celebrate in some way the eleventh anniversary of the signing of the Armistice. It will not celebrate with the frenzy of hate and military patriotism that it did on that day in 1918 when word was finally received that the most terrible war of all times had come to an end. Yet, it may be said that on this eleventh anniversary the world that loves peace has more cause to rejoice than on any other Armistice Day since the first one.

In the last year, when the significance of the war has been dawning more than ever before on a sane world, there have been many notable steps taken in the direction of peace. There was the Kellogg Peace Pact, the reparation conference, arms conferences, Hoover's trip to South America, and finally, the visit of Prime Minister MacDonald to this country. A new brotherhood of the world is being established in which enemies of the recent war are uniting, and it may be said that it took some such catastrophe as the World War to awaken the nations to the necessity of making peace secure.

Those men who made the world safe for democracy in 1918 brought about a victory that has as its direct result the peace movements of today. Humanity for all time will be their debtors and it may be safe to say that humanity, callous as it may seem some times, will not forget.

Turkeys next Monday may be more reminded of the guillotine of the French Revolution than the victory of the world war, when they are brought in here to be shipped in the first turkey pool. Turkey growers, however, may be quite willing to join in some more modern types of warfare when they consider the unexpected drop in turkey prices. Farm relief and production timed to meet the demand of the market seem to be still a long ways off.

One thing, though, it is quite evident that the younger generation in Hermiston is going to be a great help to the peace movement. Did you notice the quiet way Hallowe'en went off here?

Bad Year for City Slickers, Says Rogers

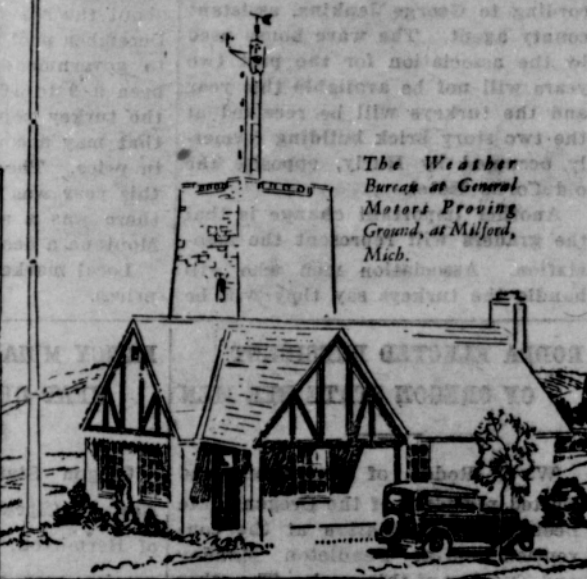

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Say, our champion New York university team looked like Man o' War till that bunch of Oregon apple knockers got a hold of 'em this afternoon. It was no place for a raccoon coat athlete, up against an old bunch of wheatshockers whose college emblem is a pair of Levi overalls.
 These old salmon piggers from the mouth of the Columbia had the city slickers strewn from goal to goal.
 With Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Columbia and Al Smith join down all in succession, it just looks like it's the old country boys' year.
 Yours, WILL ROGERS.

"What! A weather bureau?"

Testing a car's performance in heavy rain. From actual photograph.

Drawn from a photograph of a car being tested at proving roads.

VISITORS to General Motors' 1268-acre Proving Ground marvel at the sight of a complete weather bureau and ask what it is for.

The answer is that in the testing of cars every possible factor that might affect a car's performance is considered by General Motors' engineers.

So precise are some of the tests that even the difference between a sunny day and a partly cloudy day—or between a north breeze and a south breeze—is considered.

With each day's record of the mechanical tests applied to a car on the roads and hills of the Proving Ground is included a report of the exact weather conditions prevailing. The engineers then can know how weather affects performance, and can have a comparable record so that every car tested is given an equal opportunity to prove itself under exactly the same conditions.

Advance models of all the cars listed below were proved at the Proving Ground before they were introduced to the public. Read about them; then clip and send the coupon.
