WHEN ONE COW IS WORTH TWO. Get more like her and get rid of those that are not paying their board. For a satisfactory income from a dairy herd, at least 22 cows are necessary, producing an average of 250 to 300 pounds of butterfat annually. On the diversified farm it takes no fewer than 10 cows to pay overhead costs and satisfactory returns. Dairying is a "Big Business"—use "Big Business" methods. In dairying as in other branches of industry, the larger the enterprise with efficient management, the greater the income.
