SPECIAL FARM WEEK PLANNED BY COLLEGE

The latest findings of research specialists in almost every branch of Oregon agriculture information not yet in printed form are to be presented to the farmers of the state in a special Farm Science Short Course, January 26 to 31, announces A. B. Cordly, dean of the school of agriculture of Oregon State college.

Forty staff members and almost every department of the school of agriculture will take part in this course, which is an emergency measure to aid Oregon farmers in facing the present price depression. Some of the topics to be included are pastures, hops, seed production and marketing, feed grains, hogs, sheep, horses, poultry, soils, farm management, farm equipment, rural electricity, farm finance, rural taxation, weed control, potatoes, irrigation and farm sanitation.

Detailed programs will be available for distribution soon, according to G. R. Hyslop, chief in farm crops, who is heading the committee on arrangements. The schedule is to be so arranged that each farmer may attend only those parts in which he is especially interested.

"Under present conditions of greatly depressed farm prices, a producer to survive must avail himself of the very latest methods of economical production, careful marketing and sound business methods," said Dean Cordly. We are glad to put forth this extra effort in order that farmers of this state may not be without information which will help them during the coming season if the facts that they need are available here."

CHILD'S FOOD NEEDS IMPORTANT, SAYS O.S.C.

It is every child's right not only to be well born but also well reared. If the family income demands rigid economy it is better to practice it on the seasoned adult than on the developing young people, says Miss Mabel Wood, assistant professor of foods and nutrition at Oregon State college.

The food of growing children and adolescents is relatively more expensive than that for adults because of their higher expenditure of energy in proportion to their size and the greater need for building materials and vitamins, which are costlier than simple fuel and repair materials, Miss Wood points out.

The child's menu need not be elaborate, however, says Miss Wood. In fact, the simpler it is the better.

as long as it is made up of an adequate supply of wholesome foods that will supply the growing body with all the materials necessary for growth, development and protection. The use of more than a minimum amount of sweets is frowned upon, as they tend to dull the appetite and often irritate the stomach when eaten between meals.

The adolescent child often attracts the wonder of the rest of the family by the amount of food he can "stow away," unless they realize that growth is not only a question of height, but also involves laying on of muscles and fat, and the development of internal organs and a vigorous, stable nervous system. All this requires a large amount of food, and it is not uncommon, Miss Wood says, for girls between the ages of 14 to 17 to require almost as much food as a working man.

"Malnutrition at this critical age is most serious," says Miss Wood. When the energy demands are checked with the energy supply there should be a balance in favor of the body. Because of the tax on the digestive system of this enormous amount of food, it is especially essential to use care in choice and preparation of the food to have it simple and digestible. MILK, EGGS, fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals should play the major role in the diet.

WITH FARMERS AROUND THE STATE

CORVALLIS — December and January are believed by horticultural specialists at Oregon State college to be the best months for spraying peach trees for leaf curl. Results are said to be doubtful if trees are sprayed later. The recommended spray is Bordeaux mixture made with 6 pounds of hydrated lime to 50 gallons of water.

HILLSBORO — Rats are causing a large loss of feed to farmers of Washington county, according to W. S. Averill, assistant county agent, largely because the average person does not realize the extent of the damage. He recommends systematic rat-proofing of all buildings as the most satisfactory control measure, particularly where grain is stored and where hog and poultry feed is left exposed in self feeders at night.

DALLAS — The fourth year of pruning demonstrations on prune orchards is being started in Polk county by County Agent J. R. Beck. Decided improvements in yield and quality of fruit have resulted in orchards where the recommended type of pruning has been practiced, Mr. Beck reports. Some of these demonstrations are being put in the same orchards for the fourth consecutive year, and several new ones are being started.

JACKSONVILLE — Seventy-five per cent of the wheat raised in Jackson county at the present time is Federation, a survey made by County Agent R. G. Fowler shows. Yields as high as 70 bushels an acre have been reported. Many of the farmers are sticking by the club varieties which are consistently good yielders. The spring wheat acreage has decreased annually as a result of the 1924 agricultural conference recommendations, and barley and oats are being substituted.
